Alliance Formed to Help Roosevelt Termed C. I. O. 'Dummy.'

'Crusading' Reds Rule It, He Says

Affiliates Urged to Fight Its Candidates for Future Office.

On the Labor Front.

William Green denounced Labor's Nonpartisan League as "a ventriloquist's dummy for C. I. O. leaders" and called on the American Federation of Labor to withdraw from the organization.

John L. Lewis declared thousands of workers face desperate need and even starvation "in spite of the President's promise" to let no willing worker starve.

'Crusading' Reds Hit.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30.—Denouncing Labor's Nonpartisan League as "a ventriloquist's dummy for C. I. O. leaders," William Green tonight called upon the American Federation of Labor to withdraw completely from the organization formed in 1936 to mobilize labor support for President Roosevelt's re-election.

The A. F. L. president made public a report on the league which he will submit to the federation's executive council here this week and which he said undoubtedly would be adopted. It recommended:

"1. That all State federations of labor, city central bodies and local organizations affiliated with the A. F. L. be directed to withdraw from association with Labor's Nonpartisan League.

Cash Aid Withdrawn.

"2. That all organizations affiliated with the A. F. L. and their individual members be urged to cease contributing to the financial support of Labor's Nonpartisan League.

"3. That co-ordinated efforts be undertaken by the officers of the A. F. L. and all its affiliated bodies to examine carefully into the qualifications of all candidates for public office nominated or indorsed by Labor's Nonpartisan League and any of its subsidiary groups to the end that effective opposition may be marshaled against any of such candidates found lacking the proper qualifications for public office."

Maj. George L. Berry originally was chairman of the league and other officials of A. F. of L. unions participated in its campaign. Berry resigned early last year, however, after he was appointed U. S. Senator from Tennessee and was succeeded by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Sidney Hillman, another C. I. O. leader, became vice chairman.

"Crusading" Reds Blamed.

"Immediately the character of the league's activities changed," Green's report said. "It was announced that the league would become a permanent organization. . . . Overtures were made to farmers' organizations seeking their co-operation with the league in the formation of a national Farmer-Labor party. . . .

"Droves of crusading radicals and communists joined its ranks. Their objective also was to bring together the farm and labor vote into a new political party which they hoped

Snell Says Roosevelt Bars Way to Recovery

House Minority Leader Calls for Legislation to Break New Deal Shackles on Business and for Verbatim Record of White House Parleys.

By the Associated Press.

Republican Leader Snell, charging President Roosevelt is fighting measures necessary to restore confidence, called yesterday for "positive legislation" to break "the existing New Deal shackles upon private enterprise," and for a "verbatim record" of White House press conferences to avoid "disturbing misunderstanding."

"After five months of increasing unemployment, the country still is waiting for President Roosevelt's recovery program," Snell said, in a statement.

"Congress has been in session almost continuously since November 15, but there has not yet come from the White House so much as a hint of an integrated program to put people back to work.

Says World Blames U. S.

"Throughout these months, in the face of great national anxiety and much distress, the President has thrown his influence against every legislative proposal to restore normal confidence in the future of American enterprise and the security of orderly constitutional government. Today we have more than 11,000,000 unemployed and 5,000,000 more working only part time.

"The unanimous verdict of reputable economic opinion the world around fixes entire responsibility for this depression upon the Roosevelt Administration.

"Recovery cannot come until the prevailing system of Federal taxes is modified drastically, to revive the normal functions of private thrift and investment. This move the President repeatedly has resisted and obstructed.

Fears Increased Spending.

"The second urgent need is positive assurance of national fiscal stability, through reduced Federal spending. Toward this goal Mr. Roosevelt offers no effective leadership. On the contrary, his policies clearly anticipate increased expenditures.

"During the past month the President has contributed further to a general feeling of uncertainty through a series of official observations indicating great confusion of counsel. Repeated shocks of fright

'Girl in Brown' Hunted to Clear Hardy Shooting

Victim Assails Alexandria Police for Treating Him as 'Defendant.'

Alexandria police planned a search today for a woman "in brown hat and brown coat" for questioning in the shooting Saturday of Russell Hardy, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, as Hardy denounced the police for "treating me as defendant instead of as complaining witness."

Sergt. G. F. Everly, of Alexandria, said last night, "We have absolutely no description of her except as to the color of her hat and coat. Hardy refused to tell us who she was, as he said she had nothing to do with the shooting and he didn't see why her name should be involved."

Meanwhile, from his bed in Sibley Hospital, Hardy asserted that Alexandria authorities were attempting to cloak their own "stupidity." He said the authorities

Navy Plane Down in Sea; Ship Saves Crew of Five

Colored Mobile Near Panic As Shots Bounce Off Monster

By the United Press.

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 30.—Police reserves were called out today as the rattle of firearms in Mobile served notice "the monster of Marmotte street," that has terrified the colored section for three weeks, was sighted again.

The weary police were ordered to concentrate on disarming frightened citizens rather than on a search for the beast.

The latest report of the monster came from R. L. Johnson, colored, who said he saw the animal standing in the yard of his home, down near the swamps.

Johnson opened fire six times with an ancient pistol. The effect on the animal was nil, but upon Mobile's colored population it was tremendous, with every armed resident taking potshots at anything that moved.

Police, after a half-hour of this, arrested Johnson on a charge of carrying a weapon without a permit. Johnson insisted the bullets bounced off the back of the beast.

The monster has been vividly described as having "a ring of white, phosphorescent hair" around its neck, "scales like a dinosaur," and appears to be a new version of the "hound of the Baskervilles." Alleged eyewitnesses said it looked like a dog and made tracks like a lion.

More or less scientifically minded citizens believed the animal was a huge dog. Others believed it was a bear, while more imaginative experts hinted at the legendary "loup garou" or "werewolf"—half man and half wolf—that supposedly haunt the swamps.

A few think it is an escaped circus lion that now wanders into the city occasionally to pick up a few acquaintances.

Radio Debate Opens Battle Over Tax Bill

Treadway, for Republican Opposition, Proposes Change.

First salvos in a prospective weeks-long battle over the 1938 tax law were fired last night by Representatives Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, for Democrat defenders, and Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, for Republican opponents, of the pending legislation, in a nationally broadcast radio debate.

Vinson contented himself with a detailed exposition and justification of the changes in the undistributed profits tax and inclusion of the closely held corporations tax, but Treadway proposed sweeping changes in the bill for "elimination of fear and the adoption of a reasonable tax system (which) would positively reverse the present downward trend of business."

"All that is necessary is the restoration of confidence and the elimination of repressive taxation," he elaborated.

Asks Consistency.

"The former can be brought about by the establishment of a consistent rather than a vacillating legislative policy all along the line, with 'cooperation' instead of 'hate' as the watchword. The latter can be accomplished by repealing the undistributed profits tax completely and re-establishing the maximum rate of 12½ per cent on capital gains, as advocated by the Republican minority (of the House Ways and Means Committee).

Admitting there are "hardships and inequities under the combined tax burden" of present law, Vinson nevertheless stoutly maintained the new bill will rectify these, particularly as the "smaller and weaker corporations of the country" are affected. Contending that the great majority of businesses and individuals will benefit from the changes suggested in the law, Vinson ended his speech:

"The irony of it is that those materially benefitted thereby are eloquent with their silence."

Treadway, asserting that "for every dollar of tax relief which the proposed bill grants in one direction, it increases the tax burden by a dollar in another direction," concentrated his criticisms on the undistributed profits, capital gains and closely held corporations levies.

"Awakened to Mistake."

Of the first of these, he said:

"The destructive effect of the undistributed profits tax upon business and recovery, coupled with the universal demand for its repeal, has finally awakened our Democratic friends to the gravity of their mistake in placing this unfortunate tax on the statute books. While for face-saving purposes they still cling to the soundness of the principle of the undistributed profits tax, they have retreated a long way in respect of its application. . . .

"I desire to emphasize the fact that, while the penalty tax is being abandoned or reduced, as the case may be, the normal corporate income tax is being substantially increased all along the line, on both small and large corporations, with the result that corporations as a whole will be paying the same total tax burden which they now bear. The change will simply bring about a more equitable distribution of that burden.

"However, there is still much

(Pictures on Page 8.)

By the Associated Press.

Stanley Reed, President Roosevelt's second nominee to the Supreme Court, is scheduled to take his seat in that body today.

After swearing to support the Constitution and administer justice impartially, the former Solicitor General will listen to his colleagues deliver opinions.

Some of the 32 cases awaiting decisions involve:

Whether a Federal District Court has power to enjoin the National Labor Relations Board from conducting hearings on unfair labor practices; four separate controversies over the right of the Federal Government to tax the income of State employes engaged in liquidating State banks and insurance companies; an attempt by the Government to collect a $364,354 deficiency assessment from Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Co. of New York.

Japan Sends U. S. Apology On Slapping

Japan apologized to the United States for the slapping of an American consular official by a Japanese sentry at Nanking.

A Geneva plan to supply China with arms and credits to oppose Japan appeared doomed when the United States refused support and France turned against the scheme.

Japan Apologizes.

Tokyo (Monday), Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The foreign office made public today a statement expressing regrets and apologies for an incident in Nanking in which a Japanese sentry slapped the face of United States Consul John M. Allison.

The statement gave assurances that those responsible for the incident which caused the United States to lodge "appropriate representation" with the Japanese government would be punished.

"In reply to the American Ambassador's oral representations on the 29th," the foreign office said, "the Japanese vice minister of foreign affairs explained the following points at 10 p. m. on the 30th at the foreign minister's official residence:

Called "Unfortunate."

"First—Under whatever circumstances the incident might have taken place, the slapping by a Japanese soldier of the American consul in Nanking was an extremely unfortunate occurrence.

"Maj. Hongo, staff officer of the Japanese forces at Nanking, went to the United States Embassy and tendered in the name of Nanking's highest commander expressoins of regret and apologies which reportedly were accepted on the part of Mr. Allison.

"The Japanese government, on their part, also wish to express profound regret for this occurrence.

"Second—In view of the serious character of the incident the Japanese government wish to give assurances that on the completion of strict investigation steps will be taken for adequate punishment of those responsible.

"3. There exists a considerable difference between the version given in the American complaint concerning the circumstances leading up to the slapping of the United States consul by the Japanese soldier and the report received from the Japanese authorities, and since the facts will be brought to light only after careful and thorough investigation, the carrying out of the investigation must necessarily be reserved until a later date."

Rumania to Avoid Terrorism In Jewish Purge, Goga Pledges

But Economic and Social Pressure Increases in Bloodless Ouster.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 30.—Premier Octavian Goga today echoed King Carol's assurance to the world Rumania would strive to meet its Jewish problem without inhumanity.

"Neither today nor at any other time will there be acts of terrorism against the Jews or anything resembling a pogrom," the premier said.

There was no immediate modification, however, of Goga's anti-Semitic program.

So far the premier's program has entailed little actual violence—aside from sporadic beatings of Jewish attorneys at the Bucharest Palace of Justice—but economic and social pressure on Jews has been increasing day by day.

Forced Out of Jobs.

Goga's policy seems to be to spare them physically but to ease them from their jobs, eliminate them from commercial, political and social leadership and make Rumania an extremely inhospitable land to Jews.

Examination of Goga's anti-Semitic program in little more than a month in office revealed a dozen outstanding measures:

1. The suppression of three Bucharest newspapers — Dimineata, the largest in Rumania, with 150,000 circulation; Lupta, with 30,000, and

Col. Ord Killed As Plane Falls In Philippines

The life of one of the most brilliant officers in the United States Army, Lieut. Col. James B. Ord, Infantry, was snuffed out yesterday morning when a Philippine army plane, piloted by a Filipino officer, crashed against the side of a mountain near Baguio.

The plane was flying low so that Col. Ord, assistant to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, military adviser to President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, might drop messages to the native army in camp. The officer who was piloting the plane escaped uninjured.

9 Hurt in Crash Of Trolleys at Florida and 7th

Broken Noses, Lost Teeth, Bruises, Cuts Suffered as 2 Cars Meet.

Nine persons were injured when two street cars collided head-on early this morning at Florida avenue and Seventh street northwest. None was thought dangerously hurt.

Immediate investigation indicated a Calvert street bridge car, westbound on Florida avenue, split a switch, throwing it headlong into a Navy Yard car approaching eastbound on Florida avenue. Maynard W. Harrison, 40, operator of the westbound car, said, however, the switch was set and signals were clear.

Most of those injured were cut by flying glass, though several suffered bruises, broken noses and loss of teeth.

Injured were rushed to Casualty and Freedmen's Hospitals. Those accounted for a few minutes after the crash were:

At Freedmen's: Herman Bradshaw, colored, 29, of 608 M street southeast, lacerations to scalp and injured knee; Dora Smith, colored, 42, of 923 Eighth street northeast, possible fractured nose and injury to right leg; Hattie Logan, colored, 32, 928 Eighth street northeast, possible

Real Mexican Band Promised For Post's Folk Festival in May

Texan Praises Plan to Keep Alive Nation's Folkways.

As far as a Mexican is concerned, a string on a musical instrument is just like a feather in his cap. The more there are, the better it is.

Take the guitar, for instance. The rest of the world thinks it's a six-stringed instrument. A real Mexican wouldn't walk from here to there with a guitar that had less than 12 strings.

"If there were room for 18, he'd like it even better," according to Roland Harwell, president of the El Paso del Norte Art and Craft Guild and sponsor of the Tipica Orchestra.

Harwell is in Washington this week to visit various Government departments in his capacity as general manager of El Paso County Water Improvement District. Mexican folklore, music and crafts just happen to be his hobby and he brought word on this trip East that his group can be counted on to attend the National Folk Festival, which opens at Constitution Hall on May 6 under sponsorship of the

700 Are Injured; Big Buildings Fall

Planes Attack Twice in Franco's Reply to Truce Offer.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, Jan. 30.—More than 300 persons, 158 of them war orphan children, were killed today in two insurgent air raids on the Spanish government capital.

Semiofficial estimates said 700 others were wounded, while unconfirmed reports declared another 300 were killed in a flooded bomb shelter during the city's most destructive aerial attack of the civil war.

The 158 children died crouching in the basement of an old church, where they had taken refuge from an adjoining orphanage. Four insurgent projectiles scored a direct hit on the church dome and plummeted to the basement, converting it into a scene of unforgettable horror.

"Franco's Answer."

"That is Gen. Franco's answer to our air truce offer," said an army officer at the scene. He referred to the government's suggestion both sides abstain from bombing cities behind the lines.

Unverified reports of casualties in the flooded underground shelter said several bombs tore through the structure, shattering water pipes that flooded before the victims could escape through debris-clogged exits.

The orphanage from which the children fled seeking a haven in the church had been used to care for refugee children from Madrid, Asturias and the insurgent-conquered Basque country.

Destruction of Airbase Urged.

Had they stayed in their dormitories they probably would have survived for seven other children—too ill to leave their beds—were still there tonight chattering with fright but unharmed.

Crowds moving in Barcelona's blood-stained streets tonight passionately demanded destruction of the insurgents' airbase, at Mallorca, as Red Cross rescue workers toiled to aid survivors and searchers hunted for more bodies in the wreckage.

The bombings raised the total casualties for January to 1,080 killed and more than 2,000 wounded in raids on government towns behind the civil war battle lines.

It was feared the toll would be greater as many were pinned beneath the debris of buildings shattered by the dozens of 440-pound bombs.

The force of the explosions crumbled five-story houses, burying

Speedy Action On Huge Navy Bill Promised

Hearings on Billion-Dollar Measure Open Today; Leahy Called.

By the United Press.

The Vinson bill embodying President Roosevelt's demand for authority to build the greatest war fleet in American history will be pushed through Congress with all possible speed, Administration leaders said last night.

Hearings on the billion-dollar program will open today before the House Naval Affairs Committee, with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, as first witness.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, expects to have the program ready for House action about February 15. He is confident of final approval of the measure, which authorizes a 20 per cent horizontal increase over treaty limits in the Navy's fighting strength.

See Filibuster's End

Sharing interest with these hearings at the Capitol were prospects of an early break in the Senate anti-lynching filibuster and of an early report by conferees on the pending farm bill.

Agreement by mid-week on the latter was forecast by the conferees last night and there were definite signs the congressional log-jam is breaking.

In a special Sunday "mopping up" session, farm conferees virtually completed action on the bill by agreeing to postpone until 1939 operation of a provision limiting maximum benefit payments under the program to $10,000 each annually to co-operating farmers because contract plans for 1938 already have been made.

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, one of the conferees, said the group "made a lot of technical changes in the measure and hopes to finish it by Tuesday or Wednesday."

Housing Action Due.

This development came as Senate leaders prepared to side-track the anti-lynching bill, target of a three-week Southern filibuster, to call up today the conference report on new housing legislation.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, author of the housing bill which is designed to pump billions of dollars into private home construction, predicted speedy approval despite a threatened fight by a bi-partisan bloc headed by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts, to reinsert a "prevailing wage" amendment in the bill.

The supplemental Navy bill provides for three new battleships which, with the four already under construction or appropriated for in the 1939 naval supply bill, would give the United States 18 "under age" dreadnaughts.

Other increases which would be authorized include: 1,000 airplanes, 2 new aircraft carriers, 8 additional cruisers, 25 more destroyers, 9 additional submarines and 22 auxiliary vessels.

Experimental Fund.

It is believed the high point of Admiral Leahy's testimony will deal with the $15,000,000 appropriation President Roosevelt asked for immediately for construction of "small experimental vessels." The nature of these vessels has never been revealed, but it is understood they would be "suicide" torpedo boats.

Such craft have been perfected by Great Britain, Italy and Germany, and naval experts regard them as one of the most deadly weapons known in close fighting between fleets. Heretofore they have been considered unsuitable to American naval operations, but it is known that plans for them now have been drawn.

Several members of the Naval Affairs Committee have indicated they will ask Leahy ad other officers to explain the Navy Department's intention regarding construction of battleships over 40,000 tons in weight and possibly armed with 18-inch guns.

Thus far in the month-old Congress session, only a minor deficiency bill to pay benefits to growers under the sugar legislation has crept through the Senate filibuster. Awaiting action by that chamber are House-approved appropriations bills totaling $3,500,000,000 for the Navy, Treasury, Postoffice and independent bureaus.

Working leisurely until the Senate catches up with its program, the House plans today to vote on the District of Columbia appropriations bill.

Expert Urges Europe Pay War Debt in Ships

Los Angeles, Jan. 30 (AP).—A proposal to have Great Britain, France and Italy construct ships for the United States in payment of their war debts was suggested to the Maritime Commission today by Dr. Clayton D. Carus, foreign trade expert of the University of Southern California.

In sending copies of his plan to the commission and members of Congress, Dr. Carus proposed that the State Department negotiate with the three powers for construction of ships in their own ship yards, using their power, tools, labor, management and enterprise, with the maritime commission providing specifications and inspection.

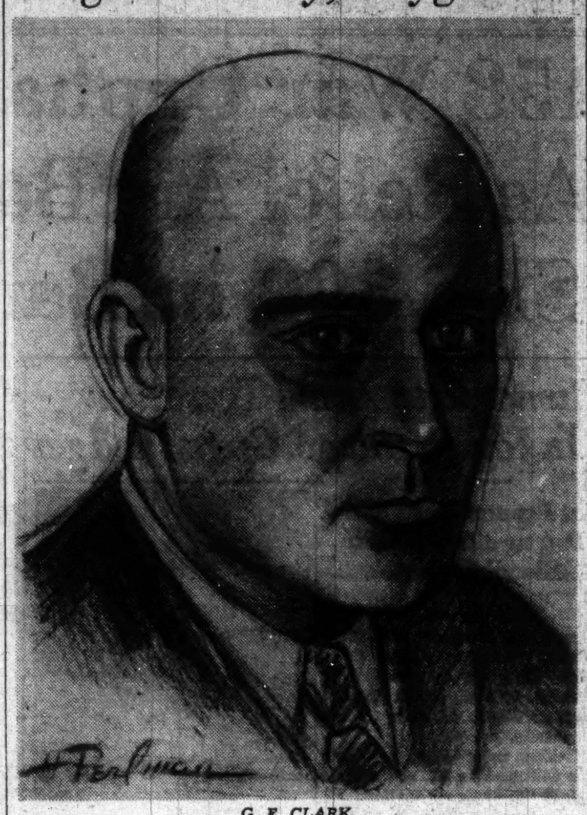
Clark Guides Richmond Park Fight for Safety, Playgrounds



G. E. CLARK.

Citizens' Association President Is Also Chief of Maintenance on D. C. Lands; Has Been in Washington Since 1921.

By Christine Sadler.

Traffic lights and increased recreational facilities come first on the "must" list of the Richmond Park Citizens Association, according to President G. E. Clark, who is also chief of the maintenance and construction division of the District's park system.

A well-equipped playground at Phoebe Hearst School would be the answer to its recreational desires at present. During the last two years the ground has been graded and partially developed. The association is hopeful that equipment will be forthcoming next summer.

Traffic lights are desired at Thirty-fourth street at Reno road and also at Porter road. The former "battle" has been going on for the last two years. Numerous wrecks at the foot of Porter road point to the needs of a light at the latter place, Clark asserts.

"Thirty-fourth is an arterial road and the morning and afternoon traffic is terrific. The average Maryland commuter likes to make town in zero flat, and school children are thereby endangered," he said.

The Richmond Park Association was formed around 1920, although real development in the area did not take place until 1926 and 1927. Between 200 and 250 citizens are members, and "when a crisis is on" they come to meetings in a hurry.

The group has fought the "usual drainage and traffic lights battles" and has a good record of accomplishment behind it.

The association is on record in favor of local suffrage for the District. To Mr. Clark's way of thinking this means "the full rights of a State."

Clark, a native of Virginia, came to the District in 1921 and has been working with the Richmond Park Association since 1926. He has been president of the organization since 1930. He is a University of Virginia man, and when he first came to Washington commuted back to the school to finish his degree in civil engineering.

During his university days he taught woodworking, and today he makes that his principal hobby. Making model ships, furniture, and turning bed rooms into ship cabins are some of the results.

In his position with the park system he directs "grass cutting, road patching, building, painting bridle-path cutting, and the like" in the District's 7,000 acres of park land—which includes the Mount Vernon Highway, Rock Creek Park, and the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

He gets the impact of citizenship battles from both directions—in his association and on his job. His telephone jangles with queries and expression of wants from associations throughout the District.

"Everything a group wants cannot be secured, but expression from community groups and loud yelping often pays," he said.

Clark and family—wife and three children—live at 3301 Porter street northwest. He still votes in Virginia.

On Wednesday—Dr. A. L. Suter, president of the Pharmaceutical Association of the District of Columbia, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Sen. Logan Cool To U. S. Judgeship

By the Associated Press.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, said last night he is not a candidate for appointment to the Sixth United States Circuit Court bench.

Asserting he does not want to be in the position of rejecting an appointment which has not been tendered him, Logan said, nevertheless, that "I am not seeking it and I don't think I want it."

There has been speculation in Congressional circles that a Senatorial contest between Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, and Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler might be avoided if President Roosevelt were to name Logan to the Circuit Court vacancy caused by the death of Judge Charles H. Moorman. In that event, Chandler, who is reported to be considering a race against Barkley, could resign and possibly be appointed by the Lieutenant Governor to Logan's seat.

RadiosEnd Silence, Reveal Sea Storm

San Francisco, Jan. 30 (AP).—A shower of enlightening messages from ships in the North Pacific today broke the 72-hour radio silence which stymied the San Francisco Weather Bureau and emphasized the desire of wireless operators to be paid for getting up at 4 a. m.

The bureau announced receipt this morning of 50 messages enabling it to chart an offshore storm extending from Puget Sound to northern California. Southeast storm warnings were posted.

In the preceding three days the bureau received only three messages from ships. Officers of the American Radio Telegraphists Association yesterday requested the operators to resume sending the weather information pending efforts to win pay adjustments.

Tinkham and Fish Charge Roosevelt Plans War Abroad

By the Associated Press.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, contended yesterday President Roosevelt had in mind "an aggressive foreign war by the United States."

Member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, he said Mr. Roosevelt's defense message, in conjunction with his address at Chicago last fall suggesting a "quarantine" of aggressor nations, could mean only that Mr. Roosevelt contemplated a foreign war.

"The United States is being armed to enter a world war on the side of Great Britain," he continued.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish today broadcast 12 accusations against President Roosevelt's foreign policies, asserting the President is "promoting war psychology, by both acts and words."

Fish said the President is "attempting to translate into legislative actuality his Chicago speech by building a Navy not merely for defense but for aggression, to enable him to quarantine and police the world."

Wheeler Asks Legislation to Aid Railroads

Senator Says Increases in Freight Rates Can't 'Save' Lines.

On the eve of opening of oral arguments on the petition of the Nation's railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate railroad finance investigating committee, said such an increase cannot "save" the roads, and called for drastic legislation to aid them.

In a formal statement issued, he said, because of "uninformed speculation" concerning his committee's legislative intentions, Wheeler said:

"If a railroad cannot meet its expenses through increased earnings, then it clearly must reduce its expenses.

"This can be done by reducing bond interest where roads are overcapitalized and by reducing the much greater expense of maintaining duplicate facilities and services of all kinds which are now required because of the wasteful competitive scramble for traffic."

Before he takes any action on new legislation, he said he would confer with President Roosevelt, "whose views are of the utmost importance to me in this matter." The Senator said he intended to talk also with representatives of all of the principal interests involved.

"Whatever legislation is passed should have for its objective cheaper transportation, adequate service and protection of the income of the men now employed by the railroads," Wheeler asserted.

"This will prove in the long run more beneficial to labor and to the security holders, as well as to the general public, than the continuance of the present chaotic and ruinous situation."

Smithsonian Finds Ancient Industrial Sites in Honduras

Evidence of a flourishing industrial civilization in northwest Honduras 400 years ago has been discovered by an archeological expedition sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and Harvard University.

Sites on the Playa de los Muertos, or "beaches of the dead," yielded relics of a high type of civilization blending Maya and South American cultures, according to a Smithsonian report issued yesterday.

At Naco, an ancient metropolis of the area, excavations revealed that the first Spanish expedition in 1526 found a city of 2,000 houses, with a population of 10,000 chiefly engaged in textile production.

Ten years later only 45 of the aboriginal population remained, the rest having been slaughtered, sold into slavery or driven into the hills.

Science Battles Arctic Epidemic

Bethel, Alaska, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Far North pitted its limited scientific resources against Arctic cold, primitive ignorance and great distance today in an effort to halt the march of death at Nunochuk, native village 40 miles from here, where epidemic cerebrospinal meningitis already has caused four deaths.

Dr. E. Werbel, ont of the few physicians in the area, prepared to fly with serum to the stricken Eskimos, who were quartered in a clump of sod huts. Mrs. Lulu A. Heron, Government nurse, ordered guards posted here to prevent terror-stricken natives from entering and spreading the disease.

Man on Relief to Attend Roper's Meeting of 500

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—On relief, living in a $3-a-week room, Robert Kaempfer was a little uncertain whether he qualified as a "small businessman"—or what the business is.

But at the invitation of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, he will go to Washington on Wednesday to attend the conference of small businessmen, called by President Roosevelt, along with the New York delegatoin of 175. Friends have financed his expenses.

Men Typists Called.

Men typists between 18 and 58 years of age may apply for stenographer and typist examinations, senior and junior grades, at the Fourth Civil Service District office, 916 G street northwest, it was announced yesterday. Application must be filed before February 17.

Spending Called Recession Cure

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania said today the only remedy for the current economic doldrums, was continued spending for relief by the Federal Government.

"When President Roosevelt came into office, the economic situation was very low," he said, addressing a convention of retail merchants. "The President established WPA, PWA, CCC and other projects, which gave the masses temporary purchasing power. But we stopped the pump priming too soon."

Gov. Earle said that between 2 and 3 per cent of the people on relief were "chiselers," but that if relief were stopped approximately 98 per cent would starve "all because of machines that give us great production, miserable distribution and tremendous unemployment."

Rum Survey Plan Called False Front

W. H. Stayton, directing head of Repeal Associates, yesterday assailed the American Business Men's Research Foundation for requesting a Federal appropriation of $50,000,000 for "dissemination of the truth about alcohol."

"The so-called American Business Men's Research Foundation is directed chiefly by professional drys and masquerades under the guise of a business men's organization," siad Stayton. "The research foundationists base their claim on a series of misrepresentations which responsible officials cannot recognize."

The foundation, said Stayton, is headed by Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher.

Editor, 9, Opens Drive For D. C. Planetarium

Nicky Arundel, 9-year-old editor of Nickey's News, who fought a successful campaign for giraffes at the Zoo, yesterday urged editorially that a planetarium be constructed in Washington as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

The editorial charged that "grown-ups won't let their children stay up late to study stars. They can see the stars in the daytime in a planetarium. They could build a planetarium for Thomas Jefferson instead of cutting cherry trees."

Flood-Control Project Pressed by McClellan

By the Associated Press.

Representative McClellan (Democrat), of Arkansas, asked the House Flood Control Committee yesterday to accelerate action on a resolution urging flood control work on the Ouachita River in Arkansas and Louisiana.

Old Carvel Hall Will Be Rebuilt

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 30.—Carvel Hall, the hotel famous throughout the country as a Navy rendezvous which was badly damaged by fire last November, will be rebuilt immediately, it was announced today by Albert H. McCarthy, proprietor. Partial occupancy of the hotel by June Week was predicted.

Plans call for the construction of a new wing with 36 rooms and suites. The hotel will be redecorated both inside and out and a large amount of early American furniture added.

General salvage and repair work will be commenced tomorrow and reconstruction will be begun within a fortnight.

Textile Workers Reject Wage Cut

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—The Committee for Industrial Organization's textile workers' organizing committee, representing 10,000 workers here, rejected, 7 to 1, a proposed 12½ per cent wage reduction, "pending improvement in the cotton textile industry." The vote was 1,794 to 239.

The American Federation of Textile Operators, including five independent unions and representing 5,000 workers, reportedly accepted "under protest" the proposal of the 16 mill owners in the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association.

'Pirate' Invasion To Open Fete

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—A big pirate ship was moored to the municipal docks today alongside the destroyer Dunlap and the Coast Guard cutters Mojave, Nemesis nad Dix to complete a sea armada that will sail into Tampa at noon tomorrow for the thirtieth Gasparilla invasion and Mardi Gras.

The Jose Gasper, pirate schooner, will sail up the Hillsborough River with guns blazing to disembark its crew of buccaneers who will demand and receive the key to the city.

"Tobacco Growing's My Job"

MY LAST CROP OF LEAF TOBACCO WAS THE BEST I'VE EVER GROWN. AND CAMELS GAVE ME A TOP PRICE PER POUND FOR MY BEST GRADE LEAF. AS THE FELLOW WHO GETS THE CHECK, I KNOW CAMELS USE MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS. YOU BET I SMOKE CAMELS. THAT GOES FOR MOST PLANTERS, TOO

MR. HAROLD L. CRAIG, a successful tobacco planter for twenty years.

TOBACCO quality is an open book to the men who know tobacco because they grow it. Do they favor any particular cigarette? "Yes," says Harold L. Craig. "Camels are the planters' favorite cigarette." That speaks volumes for Camel's quality. Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic.

Fraternity Held Solution for Labor Troubles

Mgr. Sheen Calls Upon Capital, Workers to Drop Class Hatred.

Fraternity, rather than the enmity of capital and labor and the class hatred of communism and fascism, was offered as the catholic solution of the social problem yesterday by Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of the Catholic University, on the Catholic Radio Hour.

Capital and labor, he said, "consider each other as enemies or adversary forces to be conquered; the force of money and influence on the one hand is too often pitted aganist the force of mass and organization on the other."

The general principles of the Catholic solution, he said, are based on reorganization, on the basis of function of a society presently organized on the basis of rights. Under this principle, men would not be divided according to the rights of each group but unified so each would contribute most by contributing to society according to his function.

"Social justice," he said, "then is not to be identified with hating the capitalists or hating the labor racketeers, any more than it is to be identified with the selfish rights of either. This is what both capitalism and communism forgot. The right of the capitalist to his capital and the right of the laborer to his union are both conditioned upon the services they render to society; they both require social justification, and they can both be revoked if the common good is not served, just as the right to drive an automobile can be revoked if one refuses to respect the lives of pedestrians or even the lives of jaywalkers.

He suggested groups of employers and employes organize not to battle for conflicting "rights" but to co-operate for useful exercise of their functions in the common good.

Concluding celebration of the 250th anniversary of Emanuel Swedenborg, the New Jerusalem Church of the Holy City, Sixteenth and Corcoran streets northwest, yesterday afternoon presented the sacred cantata "Glorified Christ." Music is the work of Dr. Rollo F. Maitland, F. A. G. O., and words are from Swedenborg's works.

The cantata was sung by the church choir and parts of the text were read by the Rev. Paul Sperry, pastor. Mr. Sperry also made a short address on the purposes of the cantata.

Simultaneously, the cantata was given in Boston and Philadelphia.

"We are all bruised by life, sin and unloveliness, but not one of us has fallen so low that there is no possibility of a nobler, purer life," Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, said at the morning service.

"We are too critical, hard-hearted and harsh in dealing with humanity," he said. "We withdraw from the stains of the lonely and forlorn, all of whom have within them the power of restoration. We must have the power to see the best within the worst, the truth within the untruth, and the purity within the impurity."

Reform League Assails McKellar Patronage Move

"The most brazen attempt that has yet been made to extend the spoils system in the Federal Government is the McKellar amendment to the pending independent offices appropriation bill," the National Civil Service Reform League stated today in a letter sent by its president, Robert L. Johnson, to members of the board.

"By requiring senatorial approval of future appointments to every position paying $4,000 or more per annum in all the independent agencies of the Federal Government, the McKellar amendment turns all such positions over to sordid politics," the league charged.

Recalling that the President specifically deprecated the confirmation requirement in last year's independent offices appropriation bill and urged Congress not to make further exceptions from the civil service law, the league emphasized that "there can be no legitimate excuse for requirement of confirmation by the Senate of general administrative positions."

Note Makes Wife's Death a Mystery

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Mystery surrounded the death today of Mrs. Rita White Schwartz, identified by police as the wife of a New York meat dealer, whose body was found in the garage of her Long Beach, Long Island, home.

Grace Wilson, a maid, found the body, severely bruised, in vacant chauffeur's quarters in the garage. Gas was flowing from a heater.

Police quoted the maid as saying the woman's husband, identified as Michael Schwartz, was away late today when the body was found.

"Now you can collect your $90. I hope you will be happy," read a note police said they found in Mrs. Schwartz's pocketbook. It was signed "Ree."

Fort Washington's Phone Cable Cut, Guard Is Posted

A detachment of soldiers guarded the telephone wire leading into Fort Washington last night after a cable had been cut, isolating the fort and its 550 men for four hours yesterday.

The guard was placed on the Virginia side of the river near Fort Hunt, where the cable leads from the river to telephone poles.

It was reported that an 8-foot section of the lead-covered cable, which contains ten pairs of copper wires, was cut and stolen yesterday. Authorities said it was the second time within a few months that service has been thus interrupted.

T. H. Madigan, U. S. Maritime Counsel, Dead

Pneumonia Claims Lawyer at 65; Was Hurt in a Fall 5 Months Ago.

Thomas H. Madigan, 65, assistant counsel to the Maritime Commission, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after a two-week illness, of cerebral hemorrhage and pneumonia. He had been in poor health for sometime and was discharged from Emergency Hospital on December 15, 1936, after three months' treatment for a fractured shoulder suffered in a fall.

Mr. Madigan was born in Westfield, Mass., but became prominent in Democratic politics in the neighboring State of New Hampshire. He was a member of the New Hampshire Bar and served as city solicitor of Manchester, N. H., and as Democratic State chairman of New Hampshire.

Coming to Washington as secretary to Gordon Woodbury, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Madigan was named assistant counsel to the United States Shipping Board in 1921. When the Maritime Commission was created he was appointed assistant counsel of that organization.

An uncle, Henry Madigan, of Albany, N. Y., and a cousin, Miss Mary D. O'Connor, director of purchases of the State of New York, also of Albany, N. Y., are the nearest surviving relatives. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthew's Catholic Church and the body will be taken to Newtown, Conn., for burial in the family plot in St. Rose's Cemetery.

2 to Die in Carolina For Officer's Slaying

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 30 (AP).—A jury convicted Bill Payne and Wash Turner, North Carolina outlaws, of first-degree murder tonight in the killing of George Penn, a highway patrolman, last August 22. The verdict automatically carries death sentences for the desperadoes.

Public Gets What It Demands In Movies, Town Hall Advised

Producer William De Mille Says 100,000,000 Patrons Exercise Control Over Industry; Says People Do Not Want 'Dirt.'

"The true democrat of the arts," the motion-picture is exactly what the public demands of it, William B. DeMille, pioneer film producer, last night told a Town Hall audience of 400.

Wielding a power based on 100,000,000 paid admissions each week, the American people exercises complete control over the film industry, he contended.

"The American people do not want dirt," DeMille said, "but they do want adult thought every now and then.

"Why should the motion-picture industry be invested with the chaperonage of the children of the country? Can't parents determine which pictures their children see?"

The purpose of the cinema, he concluded, should be to reflect, rather than mold the life and thought of the Nation.

Questioned by Representative Brooks Fletcher (Democrat), of Ohio, as to the cinema's responsibility for juvenile delinquency, DeMille replied that crimes by minors were "not unknown" before the advent of the movies.

"Judge Ben Lindsey agrees with me that many boys, hailed into court, simply find it convenient to say their offenses were inspired by a moving picture they had seen."

Asked from the floor whether gangster films do not give British audiences a false conception of American life, DeMille retorted that "Henry the Eighth" gave the American public a strange picture of the English monarchy.

"Why does the film industry play down to the public with its constant stream of boy-meets-girl pictures?" demanded another interrogator.

"'Romeo and Juliet,' after all, was a boy-meets-girl story," the veteran director answered.

Responding to a query on a foreign power's objection to "Inside Nazi Germany," subject of the current "March of Time," DeMille presented an original interpretation of world history since 1914.

"In the war," he said, "we had Germany, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria to furnish all the villains the screen needed. Then after the armistice we had to make up with all those people, and our last white hope was Russia. From the Treaty of Versailles to American recognition of Soviet Russia, all our film villains came from Russia."

DeMille proposed establishment of a neutral island, to be named "Villainova," from which the cinema could recruit all its bad men.

Tenant Solution By Co-operative Farm Predicted

Dr. Eddy Describes Growth of Mississippi Enterprise to Forum.

Former share-croppers now operating the co-operative farm at Rochdale, Miss., "are blazing a trail which may point the way out for the whole 8,000,000 Southern share-croppers," Dr. Sherwood Eddy, writer and lecturer, declared yesterday.

An audience of 300 heard Dr. Eddy speak on "An Adventure in Co-operatives," inaugurating a series of ten Sunday afternoon discussion meetings sponsored by the Modern Forum in the Washington Hotel.

Describing the "absymal poverty" of Southern share-croppers, the former missionary recalled his arrest in Arkansas when he first entered that State in 1936 to investigate agricultural conditions.

The majority of the "ill-housed, ill-fed and ill-clothed" one-third of the Nation, described by President Roosevelt, live in the South, Dr. Eddy asserted.

"They are met by terror, violence and lawlessness whenever they attempt to better their wretched condition," he charged.

The $17,000 farm purchased for the co-operative experiment in 1936 is now valued at $30,000, he stated, while the co-operative farming community on the land has grown from 28 member families to 150.

Principles governing the enterprise he listed as efficient large-scale farming, economy in finance, recognition of organized labor, inter-racial justice and religious belief as a dynamic social force.

Opening the forum after Dr. Eddy's address, Donald Montgomery, consumers counsel of the AAA, declared that co-operative ventures like the Rochdale farm are more likely to solve Southern agricultural problems than any Federal legislative program.

Donald Henderson, president of the Agricultural Workers Union, raised questions as to the traditional individualism of Southern farmers and the relation between co-operative farm and growing trade unionism among agricultural laborers.

"Ninety per cent of Southern farmers have unquestionably been individualists," Dr. Eddy replied, "but so were the Russians not long ago."

"As for trade unionism, the unions and co-operatives must hang together, or they will undoubtedly hang separately. There is no reason why they can't co-operate as successfully as they have in Great Britain."

In answer to a question, Dr. Eddy said the Rochdale co-operative had made a very favorable impression on the majority of non-members in that district of Mississippi.

21 Will Face Gaming Charge Before Turnage

All Suspects at Liberty Under Bonds Totaling $40,000.

Nineteen men and two women accused of violating gambling laws as a result of Saturday's raids will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning.

All of the suspects were released on bonds totaling $40,000 after they were seized in six alleged policy and bookmaking establishments.

Most important of the arrests was that of Carroll Bailey, 34, of the 5400 block North Capitol street, said to be an operator of one of the city's largest "numbers" games. He was arrested with six men and a woman in the 900 block of Second street northeast.

All, including Bailey, were charged with operating a lottery.

The other persons charged were taken in five different raids in various sections. Twelve were charged with conspiracy to set up a gaming table.

Tombstone Falls On Capital Child As Mother Watches

Walking through Congregational Cemetery, where she had just placed flowers on the grave of a friend, Mrs. Lula McAlerr, 1634 G street southeast, was not concerned when her daughter, little Louise McAlerr, 6, ran playfully ahead.

After all, thought Mrs. McAlerr, there aren't many places safer for a child.

Just then a tombstone, loosened by heavy rains and winds, suddenly toppled over on little Louise and pinned her to the ground. At Casualty Hospital she was treated for minor lacerations to the scalp.

Girl, 7, Travels Alone From China to Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—A blonde little girl, 7 years old, arrived today from Shanghai, completing a journey she started alone to rejoin the couple who found her starving four years ago. Mary Moffett stepped from a Western train, greeted her benefactors, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rodd Moffett, and said, "I think I'll like it in Chicago."

Her Swedish father is dead and her Russian mother was unable to care for Mary, so the Moffetts took her into their Shanghai home. They recently came to America for a visit and were unable to return to China because of the Sino-Japanese war.

New Expedition Planned.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Osa Johnson said here today she will return to Africa for another expedition when she has completed a lecture tour. She is the widow of Martin Johnson, killed in an airplane crash.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Yehudi Menuhin in a violin recital, with Ferguson Webster at the piano, on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: Sonata in G minor, "Devil's Trill" (Tartini-Kreisler), Chaconne (Bach), Concerto in D minor (Schumann), Hungarian Dance in D minor (Brahms-Joachim), "Zepateado" (Sarasate), Variations on a Theme from Rossini's "Mose in Egitto" (Paganini).

Whether or not Yehudi Menuhin had announced the first performance in Washington of the long-withheld Schumann concerto, the appearance of Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon, with house and stage filled to capacity, would have been the same, for the young American master of the violin does not need any adventitious aid to attract his admirers. That he selected the National Capital as one of the cities in which to play the work that he was the first to disclose in this country was, however, a satisfaction to his auditors whose curiosity had been aroused, in common with that of music-lovers everywhere, by the very considerable publicity attending its recent resurrection from the archives of the Prussian State Library.

Let it be said at once that the concerto is not one of the composer's greatest inspirations and that the evidence of waning concentration is such as to make one understand the hesitancy of both Clara Schumann and Joseph Joachim in making it known to the public. Yet it speaks in the veritable accents of Robert Schumann, and while one realizes that Joachim's criticisms of its weaknesses were justified, one feels that its vitality, its poetic validity and its charm will assure its perdurability whenever it is played with the affectionate eloquence that Yehudi expended upon it. His persuasive reading made a cool appraisal difficult.

Rhapsodical in character, the concerto is structurally loose and ideationally weak in the logical processes which musicians call "development." The themes have the unmistakable Schumann idiom, though they do not soar with the secure and weightless flight of his best themes. The energetic first movement has the sweep and vigor of an impetuous improvisation, while the short second movement is a meditative song. It is in the final lively movement that the simple repetitions of theme show an unreadiness to grapple with the material and mold it into plastic forms.

Menuhin opened his recital with a fine performance of Tartini's G minor sonata in the Kreisler version. The contained and luscious tone-quality of the opening measures warmed into glowing flame as he proceeded, yet lost nothing of its velvety smoothness in the masterly handling of the brilliant finale.

In his reading of the Bach chaconne, one observed certain divergencies of treatment which indicate that he is undergoing an artistic readjustment. Evidences in the attack of the bow, in the drawing of the tone, in the shaping of the phrases point to a possible metamorphosis of his style. It is inevitable that some changes take place in an artist whose early prodigious playing was as impersonal as though he himself had been an instrument. That he is now speaking for himself was apparent in his interpretation of the chaconne, which was intensely charged with sincere emotion.

His concluding group, devoted to an easy conquest of technical difficulties, was notable for combination of full tone and scintillant execution in the G-string variations by Paganini on the theme of the prayer in Rossini's "Mose in Egitto." He was recalled by storms of applause which were momentarily calmed by a series of short afterpieces, all of them familiar.

Jewish Center Plans $150,000 New Building

Will Be Completed Before Summer's End; Ourisman Elected 3d Time.

Completion of plans to build a $150,000 addition to the Jewish Community Center at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, was announced last night at the annual meeting of the center.

Harry Viner, chairman of a special building committee, said the contracts for the building had been awarded and that construction would start in the near future.

Funds for the new building were presented to the center last August by an anonymous donor in recognition of the "humanitarian and nonsectarian activities" of the institution. The gift made possible purchase of land on Q street immediately back of the present structure.

Viner said last night the addition would be architecturally a part of the present center, and would provide needed extra facilities to relieve crowding in the 13-year-old structure. The new building will contain additional rooms for educational work, recreation and health services.

Viner pointed out that the added facilities would not be restricted to Jewish residents of Washington.

Viner, Benjamin Ourisman, president of the center; Edward Rosenblum, member of the center board of directors, and David Stern, architect for the new building and other committee members, have personally inspected centers for community activity in Chicago, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and other cities.

Other members of the committee include Morris Cafritz, Joseph A. Wilner, Mrs. James Lansburgh, David Bornet, F. S. Gichner, Isadore Freund, Edward Ostrow, I. S. Turover, Burnett Simon, Mrs. A. L. Dembitz, Moe Offenberg, Abe Shefferman, David L. Stern, J. B. Shapiro and Morton Weiner.

Ourisman, last night re-elected president of the center for his third term, said the building would be completed before the end of this summer. Elected with Ourisman were I. S. Turover, first vice president; Burnett Simon, second vice president; Mrs. A. L. Dembitz, third vice president; F. S. Gichner, treasurer; Isadore Freund, assistant treasurer; Abe Shefferman, recording secretary, and Moe Offenberg, corresponding secretary.

Woman Zion Leader Speaks Here Tonight

Mrs. Goldie Meyerson, of Palestine, a prominent Zionist leader, will address a mass meeting of local Zionists at the Jewish Community Center tonight. She will discuss shipping activities of the Port of Tel Aviv, stressing the rapid growth of imports and exports and the need for a Jewish merchant marine.

Mrs. Meyerson is a member of the executive board of the Palestine Jewish Federation of Labor and a sponsor of the Palestine Jewish Maritime Co. The company's program includes the building of the Port of Tel Aviv, the establishment of fishing industries in the Holy Land and the development of the port's drydock.

100 Ships, 300 Planes Set for War Games

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 30 (AP).—The United States fleet was made ready tonight for a week of hard work under the dictum of its new commander in chief that its "only justification for being is to be ready to fight."

One hundred fighting ships and more than 300 fighting planes were under orders to go into action. Admiral Claude Charles Bloch took over command of the fleet Saturday. For the next five days he will see what the various forces can do. Intensive war games off the coast of Southern California begin Tuesday.

Grease on Sidewalk Causes a Homicide

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—A sidewalk grease spot today contributed to the death of one man and the arrest of two others charged with homicide.

William Brooch, 42, slipped while returning from a church social with his wife and friends. He went into a restaurant to protest, became involved in an altercation and suffered a fractured skull when he fell. He died within a few minutes. Charles Volkhenner, 27, and John Moore, 20, patrons of the restaurant, were arrested.

20 Fire Calls Net $100 Loss in D. C.

Yesterday was anything but a day of rest for Capital firemen. They were called on 20 alarms between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. Another score of calls was recorded in nearby counties.

Most of the calls were for brush or trash fires set by sparks flying in the high wind. Total damage would not amount to $100 for all of them, firemen declared.

Apparatus was summoned to the Reeves Candy Store, 1200 block of F street northwest, to extinguish a blaze in the basement. Store officials said only packing boxes were destroyed and damage was negligible.

Train 'Crashes' His Bar—And Is Alex Surprised!

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 30 (AP).—Two railroad tank cars loaded with kerosene hurtled into Alexander Klebonis, Grill here early today, tossing Klebonis from his second-story bed.

"Imagine my surprise to be so rudely awakened, then find the bar room practically full of freight cars," said Klebonis. "I got out of there right away."

He was uninjured. Acting Deputy Fire Chief Edward Moffett said the accident was caused in switching the cars to a siding near the grill.

All Reich Marks Achievement of Hitler's 5 Years

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Totalitarian Germany today celebrated the fifth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power with parades, speeches and praise for the Reichschancellor's solution of five major problems since 1933.

While Hitler and his aides turned to the future and the still unsettled questions of German colonial demands, foreign relations, economic self-sufficiency and the place of the Church in the National Socialist state, Nazis throughout the country reviewed the handling of these problems:

Unemployment — Practically eliminated by the introduction of compulsory labor service, conscription of all able-bodied men for two years of military service, a vast program of roadmaking, land reclamation and construction of public buildings.

Versailles Treaty restrictions—All the irritating shackles of the World War peace broken and Germany transformed into a first-class military power.

Jews—Germany stands in a fair way to drive Jews completely out of the Reich's economic sphere as they already have been driven out of social and political life.

Politics—Once a country of two dozen political parties, the Reich now has but one, the National Socialist. All others have been abolished and all rallying points for possible formation of opposition eliminated.

International isolation — This was almost complete in 1933, but now Germany has close alliances with Italy and Japan, and enjoys a special friendship with Yugoslavia, Poland, Hungary and Rumania.

Brass Bands Play.

Brass bands stationed throughout Berlin played an 8 a. m. reveille, calling capital residents out to celebrate the anniversary.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, addressing a large rally of Hitler youth, reviewed achievements of the five years and pictured present-day Germany as a powerful, united nation where justice reigns.

In another ceremony, Hitler awarded national prizes for accomplishments in art and science. He gave jeweled stars to four men, including Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, official Nazi philosopher and creator of Teuton Neo-paganism, and a fifth to the widow of Ludwig Troost, who died in 1934 after designing the monumental Nazi edifices since erected at Munich.

Wilhelmstrasse was jammed with an enthusiastic multitude which witnessed a march by Hitler's lifeguards.

The Fuehrer took the salute of the marching men in his limousine. The surging crowds would not disperse until Hitler again reappeared, this time on the balcony of the chancellery, where he saluted and expressed his thanks.

Diplomatic Wives in Berlin Honor Visiting Yugoslavian Premier

With brilliant jewels and lavish gowns did diplomatic wives in Berlin honor visiting Milan Stoyadinovich, Yugoslavian prime minister. Host at reception was German Foreign Minister von Neurath, seen talking to Mrs. Stoyadinovich. Some observers believe that Germany is seeking to woo Yugoslavia away from French alliances. Late last year, France and Yugoslavia renewed their treaty of friendship for another five years.

3,000 Chinese Reported Slain Over 3 Fronts

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Jan. 30.—Three thousand Chinese soldiers tonight were reported slaughtered in smashing Japanese victories on the two principal warfronts and in guerilla combat west of Shanghai.

On the Chinese lifeline front, a decisive battle was developing from a series of sanguinary skirmishes.

Cold and sleet gripped plains, river valleys and mountainlands along the Lunghai Railway running from the upper Kinagsu Province coast into the heart of China.

A Japanese army spokesman, disclosing operations of the past 48 hours, said "at least 3,000 Chinese" were killed on the southern side of the double-edged Lunghai front and in the Wuhu and Soochow areas of the Yangtze River Valley.

2,000 Killed on Railway.

Several thousand other Chinese scattered and fled before the Japanese thrusts, the spokesman reported.

The Japaneses said their forces encountered 5,000 Chinese west of Mingkwang along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway some 100 miles southeast of its junction with the Lunghai line at Suchow, keystone of the Chinese lifeline defenses.

"After a sharp battle the Chinese fled, leaving 2,000 dead," the spokesman said. The Japanese took no prisoners.

Another thousand Chinese, part of the guerilla forces that had been knifing at the Shanghai-Nanking supply lines, were rounded up and shot south of Soochow. Two thousand others were said to have been dispersed.

On the Wuhu front, in the Yangtze Valley southwest of Nanking and about 200 miles west of Shanghai, there was another fierce clash between the Chinese and the Japanese captors of Wuhu. The spokesman said the Chinese lost heavily.

Wuhu, whose capitulation undermined the Chinese defense of Nanking and aided the Japanese to take the Chinese capital December 12, had been the objective of a strong counter-offensive.

Strength for Year Claimed.

Moscow, Jan. 30 (AP).—Pen de Hue, acting commander of the Chinese Communist army, was quoted today in the Soviet army newspaper Red Star as saying Chinese troops in North China could hold out against Japan more than a year while reinforcing the army with guerilla warriors.

Japanese military tactics, he said, have been "far from brilliant," with the main reliance on planes, heavy guns and tanks.

Dodd, Rep. Fish And LaGuardia Lambast Nazis

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—As pro-Nazi residents of New York celebrated tonight the fifth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power, supporters of the nonsectarian Anti-Nazi League jammed Carnegie Hall to applaud critics of the German government program.

William E. Dodd, former American Ambassador to Germany, and Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, were among speakers at Carnegie Hall, where the 4,000 available seats were occupied more than four hours before the meeting opened.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, outspoken critic of Hitler, sent a message to the league in which he said:

"Five years ago a vicious blow was struck at democracy and human freedom when Adolf Hitler and naziism assumed power in Germany . . . Today the issue of protection and extension of democracy becomes ever a more pressing one. Dictatorship has created a grave menace to the peace of the world."

Representative Fish, referring to supporters of naziism, facism, and communism here, told the Anti-Nazi League meeting that "there is and can be no compromise with these foreign and dictatorial forms of government, whether of the right or of the left."

"If these alien Nazis, Fascists, and Communists continue to spread their doctrines of hatred against our free institutions . . . then it is clearly the duty of Congress to enact drastic laws to send these folks back home," he said.

Goga Promises Rumania Won't Terrorize Jews

Rumania

Adevenul, with 70,000. They had many Jewish employes and were democratic in policy.

2. Discharge of all Jewish employes in state service, though their number was small proportionally.

3. Regulations, particularly against liquor dispensers, making it virtually impossible for Jews to work or live in villages.

4. Prohibition in various communities of slaughtering cattle in the kosher manner.

5. An order making it illegal for a Jewish household to employ gentile maids less than 40 years old. Enforcement of the order was postponed until April 1, when it became apparent the government was running into an embarrassing unemployment situation.

6. Expulsion of Jews from the Rumanian bar association. Unless members, lawyers cannot practice.

Doctors Eliminated.

7. Elimination of Jewish doctors from state hospitals and clinics.

8. Closing of Jewish circulating libraries on the ground that they "promulgated Communist propaganda."

9. Regulations, such as requiring stores to be open Saturdays, which are offensive to orthodox Jews.

10. Requirement that widows of Jewish war veterans prove their citizenship before they are entitled to pensions, a retroactive measure affecting widows already receiving pensions.

11. A decree striking Jews from polling lists and requiring them to prove Rumanian citizenship within 30 days before permitting them to seek re-establishment as voters.

12. An order prohibiting further employment of Jews as waiters in cafes or restaurants.

In some quarters the impression prevailed the government's stringent measures were propaganda for parliamentary elections scheduled March 2—thus capitalizing the wave of intense nationalism admittedly sweeping the country.

Contradicting this, however, was Goga's statement today that "Nationalism did not begin with the activities of our National Christian Party."

"We are merely a link in the chain," he said. "Nationalism and anti-Semitism are not the invention of our party. It is anchored deep in the consciousness; Rumania's nationalism is now a strong tradition and platform for our collective life of the future."

By the Associated Press.

Britain Serves Warning.

Geneva, Jan. 30.—Great Britain warned Rumanian Foreign Minister Istrate Micescu tonight she would demand an extraordinary session of the League of Nations' Council if Premier Octavian Goga enforces anti-Jewish measures promulgated by his government.

Viscount Cranborne, British undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, reminded Micescu that France and Britain were to assist the council president in observing the situation of Jews in Rumania during the 60-day period within which Goga's regime was to report on petitions of world Jewish organizations to the League for action.

Micescu's assurances that most of the anti-Semitic campaign in Rumania was only "pre-election talk" have been accepted with reservations, French and British spokesmen declared.

Comptroller Gordy to Enter Race for Maryland Governor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Jan. 30.—Friends of William S. Gordy, of Salisbury, State comptroller since 1921, indicated today he would announce his candidacy for Governor tomorrow or Tuesday.

These friends indicated Gordy's candidacy was to be advanced as a direct threat to Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, first to announce himself for the 1938 Democratic primary. They added that Democratic National Committeeman Howard Bruce, who was invited last summer by Jackson to oppose him, would support Gordy.

It was pointed out that Gordy probably could swing a strong following in the heavily populated sections because of his position as distributor of largess through all welfare and all social security operations in the State. It was also pointed out that the controller is in close touch with all sections through his State income inspectors.

Other announced candidates for the governorship are Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, president of the State Senate; and Herbert O'Conner, of Baltimore.

Italian Chides U.S. On Arms Program

Rome, Jan. 30 (AP).—The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, chided President Roosevelt today for the United States' rearmament program which he described as "colossal."

Writing in Il Voce D'Italia, Gayda said the President's program "fits badly the charges repeatedly echoed in his speeches against authoritarian states who are suspected of aggressive intentions solely because, following the universal course, they also take care to rearm."

King George Ends Vacation to Meet 4,000 Debutantes

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—King George and Queen Elizabeth will return Monday from their Sandringham holiday to a refurbished palace and the problem of meeting 4,000 anxious young ladies.

Two other matters were understood to be due for discussion by the King and his ministers:

1. The official precedence to be accorded the Duchess of Windsor, wife of Britain's abdicated King Edward VIII.

2. The projected royal visit to India in 1939.

The King must decide how many courts are to be held. There may be four this season to accommodate all the 4,000 debutantes and others who want to be "commanded" to be presented to the King and Queen.

Rites for Everard Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Nathaniel Everard, 29, who died at Hoeopathic Hospital Saturday night while the fencing team he captained was giving an exhibition at the President's Birthday Ball, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Tabler's funeral home, 4217 Ninth street northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Captain of the Young Men's Christian Association fencing team for a number of years, Mr. Everard was considered one of the ablest fencers in the District.

Members of the team will place mourning insignia on their foils for the remainder of the competitive season in remembrance of Mr. Everard, it was announced yesterday by Maj. E. L. Dyer, coach.

Conditions of all three were said to be undetermined.

Sent home after treatment at Casualty: Russel Crockett, 22, 1014 Columbia road northwest, injuries to upper lip; Mary Turner, 32, 6507 Maple avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., injuries to lip and teeth; Roger Chase, 44, 1343 Q street northwest, injuries to right hand; Frank Wilson, 26, 923 French street northwest, injuries to chest; Roosevelt Greer, 33, 1311 Riggs street northwest; injuries to chest and face; Eugene Starr, 23, 739 Park road northwest, injuries to face and ribs. All are colored.

The left front portions of both cars were badly shattered. Both were old model vehicles.

More than a score of passengers were on the westbound car while only three occupied the one eastbound. Though both cars were said to be moving slowly at the moment the Calvert Street Bridge car suddenly flung itself into the path of the other, passengers on both were hurled against seats and were thrown to the floor.

Some Victims Walk Away.

After a few seconds of stunned silence cries for help and screams of fear followed the rending crash of wood and metal. Both operators assisted passengers to leave the wrecked vehicles.

Several slightly injured passengers were believed by police to have walked from the crash and gone home without medical attention.

The switch at the point is operated by electro-magnets from inside the cars. The westbound car moving slowly through the switch, was swung from its path and made a left turn into the path of the oncoming Navy Yard car. Neither could be halted before they crashed together.

Both were pushed from the scene within a few minutes after the wreck by service trucks.

Reorganization Held Dictator Bill

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Amos R. E. Pinchot, liberal lawyer and publicist, charged today the original bill proposed to give President Roosevelt authority to reorganize the Government "was signed—and deliberately designed — to strip Congress of power and centralize control in the White House."

In a sharply worded open letter to the President, released here by the Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, Pinchot said the measure "would unquestionably transform the Government into a dictatorship." Details of the bill, he asserted, were intentionally kept secret nearly a year.

He urged the President to drop any plans for reorganization and "let the country concentrate on recovery."

First Salvos Fired in 1938 Tax Bill War

Tax

room for improvement in this regard, inasmuch as the proposed retention of the undistributed profits tax principle with respect to corporations having more than $25,000 net income perpetuates the same inequities to which the existing law gives rise, the difference between the two measures simply being one of degree.

"The proposed 4 per cent undistributed profits tax is subject to every criticism which we of the Republican minority made to the existing tax. It still puts a penalty on the accumulation of 'rainy day' reserves, and on earnings used for debt retirement and for the creation of new employment opportunities through plant rehabilitation and expansion. It still taxes at a higher rate the business that is least able to pay. It still encourages monopoly by putting a burden on corporate growth."

Turning to the tax on closely held corporations, Treadway said:

"This country has always been regarded as the land of opportunity. Most of our large manufacturing and retail establishments had very humble beginnings. They grew to their present size because the owner very wisely 'plowed back' his earnings into the business, gradually expanding and employing more help. The proposed new penalty tax on closely held concerns will hamper the growth of small enterprises and thus encourage monopoly. It will put family business concerns at a great competitive disadvantage with chain organizations whose stock is widely held and which therefore escape the penalty tax. It will force local concerns into the hands of absentee owners having no interest in the development of the community. Worst of all, it will crush individual initiative and enterprise as typified by Mr. Henry Ford."

So far as the proposed changes in the capital gains tax are concerned, Treadway said that "I am convinced that they will have little if any beneficial effect upon the capital market, either in speeding up capital transactions or in inducing the investment of funds in private enterprise."

He contended "the surtax rates applicable to capital gains are still too high to allow a normal turnover of capital assets."

In answer, Vinson omitted reference to the capital gains tax but of the undistributed profits and closely held corporations imposts, he said:

"If they (corporations subject to the tax) make a complete distribution, their rate of tax under this proposal will be 16 per cent and in case of a 50 per cent distribution, their rate of tax will be 18 per cent. This recommendation will give corporations some incentive to make reasonable distributions without going to the extent of making unwise distributions. Thus, if all moneys are desired to be retained for debt payment, plant extension or other corporate use, there would be one burden of 4 per cent of the net income. . . .

"The family owned or closely held proposal will mean, annually, $50,000,000 in revenue to the Treasury. An alternative proposal to this proposition is to increase the 20 per cent maximum rate on all corporations with net incomes of more than $25,000. We are told by the Treasury experts that it will require a rate of about 22¼ per cent. That would mean that the corporate tax on all corporations with net incomes of more than $25,000 would range from 16 to 22¼ per cent.

"In other words, this would increase the corporate tax on some 24,000 corporations in lieu of the surtax upon 500 to 1,000 family owned or closely held corporations as specifically defined. Personally, I do not favor such a proposal. The increase of the maximum rate from 22 to 22¼ per cent would fall upon all such corporations who may need to retain that money for plant expansion, debt retirement or for other corporate purposes. In my opinion, the added tax burden upon the family owned or closely held group would fall much more lightly than upon all such 24,000 corporations. As a matter of fact, many of the corporations whose representatives testified in opposition to this proposal would, under their ordinary dividend policy, in my opinion, pay less taxes under the subcommittee proposal than under the 22¼ per cent rate."

Labor Asks 50,000 To Fight Sales Tax

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—Organized labor sought today to mobilize at least 50,000 workers for a march upon city council to protest against the recently enacted 2 per cent retail sales tax.

Executive councils of the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor called meetings Monday and Tuesday to vote a special holiday on the day Mayor S. Davis Wilson is expected to veto the levy.

Council adopted the levy and three other revenue measures Thursday to meet an $8,000,000 deficit after the State Supreme Court ordered a budget approved by tomorrow.

C.I.O. Maps Drive In Utilities Field

By the United Press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization last night announced formation of a utility workers organizing committee to unionize approximately 200,000 workers in the Nation's electric light and power industry.

Establishment of the committee constituted a new invasion of fields now dominated by American Federation of Labor affiliates. The Power International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of the A. F. of L. long has been active in this field. The group was set up at the close of a week-end conference of utility workers representatives here.

"At the same time loyal adherents of the A. F. of L. still allied with the league began to look askance at these strange developments. They began to doubt the nonpartisan character of the league.

"These doubts were confirmed last fall when the league actually put its own candidates in the field for local offices. In some cities officials of the C. I. O. unions were nominated for public office. . . ."

3,000,000 Jobs Demanded.

By the Associated Press.

John L. Lewis declared last night thousands of workers face desperate need and even starvation "in spite of the President's promise" to let no willing worker starve.

In a letter urging all affiliates of his committee for industrial organization to notify Congress "immediate action is needed" to provide 3,000,000 work relief jobs for the unemployed, Lewis added:

"The Administration has taken upon itself this obligation, and the workers of America expect it to fulfill its promise."

3,000,000 Jobs Asked.

No more work relief jobs are available to meet an unemployment situation that is reaching "a very serious emergency," he said.

"Unless an immediate order is made by the Administration to the W. P. A. to open its rolls and put at least 3,000,000 people to work, there will be dire suffering in the Nation. This order can be given immediately. Following that there will be needed a supplemental appropriation by Congress for the rest of the fiscal year up to June 30, 1938, sufficient to cover at least 3,000,000 jobs."

Saying the C. I. O. "has taken upon itself the duty of presenting the case of the unemployed," Lewis added that the affiliated United Mine Workers already were calling the matter to the attention of Congress.

The miner' union, of which Lewis is president, has urged an immediate appropriation of $1,000,000,000 to cope with present unemployment and an added $2,000,000,000 to meet needs in the next fiscal year.

Lewis' letter said;

"Chicago reports that 25,000 now need W. P. A. jobs; Detroit needs at least 10,000 jobs immediately; Minneapolis needs 5,000; Milwaukee must have at least 10,000 jobs for C. I. O. members; Buffalo workers are desperate with 65,000 seeking relief and no available W. P. A. projects.

"Many other cities and States report similar desperate situations."

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 30 (AP).—Representatives of five American Federation of Labor unions joined today with delegates of 76 C. I. O. unions to back a labor non-partisan league program in Michigan.

The State branch of the league, charting a course to "give labor its voice in government" without creation of a third party, adopted a program calling for establishment of a permanent State organization with county, district and ward committees.

Homer Martin, president of the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers Union, was elected president and Kenneth Ford, president of the A. F. L. in Battle Creek, was named among vice presidents.

Wisconsin Turns Down Utility Financing Plan

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30 (AP).—The Public Service Commission announced yesterday that it had refused to approve a $14,000,000 refinancing plan proposed by the Northern States Power Co. of Eau Claire.

"If the commission were to grant this application, it would, in effect, be in the position of permitting innocent prospective purchasers to invest in securities of a corporation which the commission knows is grossly overcapitalized," the order of denial said.

and alarm which have come from the White House press conferences have served only to aggravate the difficulties of our business situation.

"Possibly a great deal might be accomplished in the direction of national stability and calm thinking, by an immediate revision of the White House press conference method; with a view particularly to avoiding official pronouncements based upon inadequate of erroneous statistical material prepared by the President's more volatile economic advisers.

"To avoid confusing or conflicting judgments as to the meaning of the President's statements, it is suggested that a complete verbatim record of all White House press conferences be made available in proper form for consultation and reference by the accredited members of the press galleries of Congress.

"By this method every utterance which the President might feel had been misinterpreted in the press could be examined objectively in the official record. This reform undoubtedly would help give the country a sense of direction. It might also fix responsibility for some recent disturbing misunderstandings.

"A depression flowing from mistaken policies and administrative ineptitude in Washington will not correct itself automaticallly. Positive legislation is required to break the existing New Deal shackles upon private enterprise.

"Congress and the country now have been waiting for three months for the President's support of urgently needed corrective legislation. But thus far we have seen only a spectacular series of White House political maneuvers—all of them calculated to confuse the public mind and to evade responsibility for the new depression."

risk becoming involved in the Far Eastern war, opposed the plan.

The League Council, meeting tomorrow, probably will adopt a resolution giving the plan a half-hearted blessing, but it appeared certain that there would be no direct action on furnishing arms, munitions and credits to China.

The plan of direct aid was worked out in a secret conference among the League delegates of Britain, China, Russia and France.

It was announced semi-officially last night, following pessimistic reports from Washington and Paris, that the League Council would proceed with the plan without seeking indorsement of the United States.

Plan Believed Doomed.

Observers interpreted the reluctance to approach Washington as an admission that the plan is doomed. It originally was understood that Britain, on behalf of the other conferees, would submit to Washington concrete proposals for supplying the Chinese with arms and munitions.

Now, however, British and French sources say there will be no joint approach to the United States but that the Chinese will be "allowed" to ask Washington for aid if they wish.

Thus the plight of the Chinese appears to be unchanged from its position before Chinese delegates threatened to demand League sanctions against Japan.

Threat Brought Compromise.

It was this threat that brought about the scheme of international direct aid as a "compromise" to prevent further disruption of the League over the troublesome article XVI of the Covenant.

Last night's announcement, apparently inspired by British quarters, was issued after Secretary of State Cordell Hull in Washington indicated the United States would continue its policy of permitting arms shipments to both Japan and China.

Dispatches from Paris said not only France, but Britain and Russia, might be reluctant actually to proceed on China's demand for aid unless the United States is prepared to join them.

Allison Held Not Insolent.

Shanghai, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Japanese spokesman who said last week that the slapping of John M. Allison, third secretary of the United States Embassy at Nanking, grew out of "the insolent attitude adopted by Allison" tonight amended the statement as "erroneous."

He said it should have read: "The case arose from the bold attitude adopted by Allison"—not insolent.

their occupants. Huge craters were dug in the streets, cutting water and gas mains and spewing up the twisted pipes.

Forty persons were killed when one bomb crashed into a medieval church where they had sought shelter.

Resumption of the insurgent aerial attack, just as hopes were growing for "an air armistice," stunned the people of Barcelona.

For four days since Defense Minister Indalecio Prieto suggested a truce on attacks behind the lines Barcelona had waited—in a semblance of security.

Most victims of the first raid at 9 a. m. were still in bed.

Scarcely an hour later they were back.

The Associated Press correspondent was still typing out the story of the first raid when nine bombs were heard hissing down, followed at split-second intervals by thunderous explosions.

The bombs of the second raid fell almost in the same area as the first.

Police Check on 500 In New York Roundup

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Detectives today checked the records of almost 500 criminal suspects they rounded up in a series of early morning raids in scores of Manhattan pool rooms and "mob hangouts."

Aroused by the shooting of four policemen in recent weeks, Assistant Chief Inspector Francis J. Kear instructed detectives last night to bring all hoodlums to police stations.

Unions' Incorporation Held Path to Fascism

New York, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Advocates of compulsory incorporation of all unions do not realize that they "are proposing legislation which would be the first step towards totalitarian, fascist state in America," Louis Waldman, labor attorney, told the National Republican Club today.

Facts On District Relief.

Before the House passes the District appropriations bill today it will be asked to consider the meager allowance for unemployment relief. In some respects that is the most important item in the bill. It is of the utmost importance that the House be given a clear understanding of what acceptance of this provision in its present form would mean to destitute families here.

Unfortunately, the picture has already been clouded by foggy reasoning on the subject. Chairman Collins of the sub-committee on District appropriations has told his colleagues that the aggregate amount proposed for relief in the fiscal year 1939 is the same as voted for the current year, while there has been a reduction in the number of District welfare cases since last July. Anyone familiar with the situation knows that the impression thus given is misleading. The number of cases has been reduced only because a lack of funds has forced the Public Assistance Division to turn away hundreds of needy families. In fact, more than 1,000 such families were denied aid in December.

To say that relief estimates equal the appropriation for the current year is, moreover, to admit their inadequacy. Washington has nothing whatever to spend on care of destitute families in which the breadwinner is physically capable of holding down a job. So far as can be learned it is the only city in the entire country in this sorry plight. Even last winter, when employment was probably more plentiful than it is now, the Commissioners recognized the urgent need of relieving this group. But their request for a supplementary appropriation was bottled up in the Federal Budget Bureau and did not reach Congress.

In the light of these facts Mr. Collins' assurance that the relief fund aggregates the same as last year becomes a powerful argument for a larger allowance. Nor can it be accurately said that to cut the public assistance fund and increase social security benefits by an equal amount makes no change in the relief picture. Social security funds may go to individuals not previously drawing relief.

It is the current need of Washington's destitute employables, rather than previous inadequate appropriations, that should be considered in the House today. If the majority will take the trouble to examine the facts of unrelieved suffering and hardship here, it is difficult to believe that they will reject an increase in this item.

Dangers of Federal Licensing.

The growing importance of the O'Mahoney-Borah bill providing for Federal licensing of corporations is attested by its being singled out for attack by the United States Chamber of Commerce. In a sharply worded report the chamber's committee on manufacture calls attention to the tremendous powers of regulation that would be lodged in the hands of Federal authorities if the licensing bill were to be enacted.

Under a very inclusive definition of interstate commerce, most of the industrial and business corporations of the country would come within the scope of the proposed legislation. To qualify for licenses, these concerns would have to modify certain practices which Senators O'Mahoney and Borah believe to be adverse to the public interest. They would also have to meet the labor standards embodied in the licensing bill. And finally, they would be subject to the penalties of the licensing measure if they failed to comply with the provisions of other regulatory acts, such as the anti-trust laws and the Wagner labor relations act.

In short, given the power to license and to attach conditions to the granting of licenses to do business, the Federal Government could by indirection establish far-reaching control over every aspect of corporate activity—dealings with labor, with competitors, with shareholders and with consumers. The Chamber of Commerce rightly holds that it would be most injurious to sanction any such use, or rather abuse, of the licensing power. To the extent that Federal control of corporate activities seems desirable, it should be effected by passage of direct regulatory measures. Enforcement of those laws, moreover, should be entrusted to designated administrative agencies—not made the responsibility of a licensing authority wielding the power of life and death over the licensees.

Senator O'Mahoney emphasizes the fact that the conditions which would be imposed upon licensed corporations are set forth in the bill and not left to the arbitrary determination of any licensing agency. That, however, does not reassure businessmen who note the lengths to which regulation might go under the terms of the bill and who are aware of the dangerous precedent that its passage would set for progressive encroachment by the Federal Government upon the domain of private business.

Repeal The Neutrality Act.

The crucial discussions regarding the Far Eastern situation, held in Geneva during the last few days, do not officially concern us. The United States is not represented on the League Council and thus took no part in the discussions. By the same token, this Nation is not legally bound by the tentative agreement to aid China purportedly reached by Great Britain, France and Russia. China has been duly found by the League to be a victim of aggression.

Theoretically the United States continues to be a free agent so far as any such agreements are concerned. We can accept them or reject them. We can decide that it would be to our best interests to join with other powers in helping provide China with the means of continuing her heroic struggle to preserve her independence. An excellent case can be made out for such a course. On the other hand, we may decide, as Senator Pittman suggests we should, that the wisest policy for the United States at the moment is one of "strict neutrality." "It would be unneutral," he said, "to supply armaments to one side in the war and not to the other side."

But such "neutrality," in the definition of the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, would obviously go by the boards the minute the President were deprived of his discretionary power regarding the application or non-application of the neutrality act. For with shipment of arms, munitions and instruments of war barred to both sides, Japan would suffer far less than would China. And if, further, the cash-and-carry provisions of the law were applied, shipments of essential raw materials to China would disappear altogether, while shipments to Japan would continue about as usual. Japan has the necessary shipping; China has not.

So far the President has refrained from invoking the neutrality law. Neither China nor Japan has yet declared war, a technicality which has enabled the Chief Executive, with the approval of a very substantial body of informed public opinion, to maintain a free hand regarding the Far Eastern crisis. This, in turn, has made it possible for the Government to act with vigor in defense of American rights and interests when these have been threatened with extinction by the aggressor. Such course of action has also enabled us to explore with other nations the possibility of mediation or other action capable of leading to a constructive solution of the Far Eastern problem on the basis of the Nine-Power Treaty.

There is every reason why this freedom of action which the United States has thus far enjoyed with reference to the undeclared war between China and Japan should continue to be maintained. There is, on the other hand, not the slightest reason why the control of American foreign policy in an extremely important sphere of action should be, as it was by the neutrality act, turned over to others.

Yet that is the sorry fact of the present situation. For if we have enjoyed liberty of action it has been by grace of Japan and that freedom will cease the moment Japan finds that its termination is to her advantage. The sword of Damocles that hangs over the Department of State is the fact that Japan, by declaring war, can force the invocation of the neutrality law.

Nor is the threat one disturbing to this Nation alone. It is also disturbing to every other nation concerned with Japan's aggressions in the Far East. For even should the United States decide on a co-operative course of action at this time, the possibility would remain, as one French official has pointed out, that Japan, by declaring war, would hamstring the United States and thus leave League nations and China "out on a limb."

The moral is plain: If there were sound reasons for not invoking the neutrality act hitherto; and the great majority of Americans side with the President in this matter, these reasons remain just as sound whether Japan declares war or not. Plain common sense, therefore, demands the immediate repeal of the neutrality act. So far as our foreign relations are concerned, it has always been a liability. It is now more of a liability than ever.

Tangled Responsibility.

Secretary Ickes' coup against the staff of his own Undersecretary of the Interior is an unsavory sequel to the reports of espionage and wire-tapping that have recently come out of his department. Presumably unable to "fire" Charles West, who serves as legislative "contact man" for the President, Mr. Ickes seems determined to make the position of his subordinate untenable.

Aside from Mr. Ickes' display of temperament, however, this intra-departmental row focuses attention upon an important problem. When a man is appointed Undersecretary of the Interior so that he may serve as a White House emissary on Capitol Hill it would be surprising if a certain amount of friction did not arise. Theoretically such an official is subordinate to the Secretary of the Interior. But actually his duties are largely outside of the department and he seems to be responsible only to the President.

The inadequacy of the President's staff is fully recognized. In the Brownlow report on governmental reorganization a strong argument was made for a staff of executive assistants "possessed of high competence, great physical vigor, and a passion for anonymity." With such a group of aids, the present unsatisfactory practice of appointing men to departmental posts for White House service could be abolished.

In this case, however, it appears that the post of Undersecretary of the Interior was especially created for Mr. West at the President's suggestion. Why was not the new post directly attached to the White House? Since Mr. Ickes' impetuous revolt against this practice tends to emphasize the desirability of regularizing positions of this sort, it may serve a useful purpose in spite of the petty reprisal tactics he has employed.

"Upward, Outward And Down"

The National League of Women Voters is protesting vigorously, and it may be hoped effectively, against Senator McKellar's proposed amendment to the Independent Offices Appropriations Bill. This patronage rider would make positions carrying salaries of $4,000 or more Presidential appointments subject to Senatorial confirmation.

Future appointments to important administrative positions, in such independent agencies as the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Social Security Board, would thereby become political spoils. As the league bluntly states, Senate confirmation "in practice is the very negation of a non-political merit system" since, in most instances, the person confirmed must be politically acceptable to the Senators from the State where the appointee resides.

Senator McKellar's patronage rider is, however, only an outstanding indication of a current tendency which the National League of Women Voters views with increasing concern. That is the practice of taking high-salaried top positions out of the classified civil service and making them appointive.

Exemptions from civil service rules and regulations based solely on salary classifications cannot be justified on the ground that such positions are policy-making. As a matter of fact very few positions outside of the Cabinet are policy-making jobs which should be assigned to partisan supporters of the Administration in power. Most Government positions, even the highest paid, are administrative posts, calling for training and experience. Merit, not political affiliations, should govern such appointments.

If the merit system of appointment is to be extended "upward, outward and downward," as the President recommends, it is essential to head off spoilsmen like Senator McKellar, who would impair the already reduced efficiency of the civil service. Moreover, removal from the classified services of positions carrying good salaries, and conferring power and prestige, would discourage able and ambitious young persons from entering Government employment as a career.

A clear distinction between policy-making positions and those subject to civil service regulations should be reached before passage of reorganization measures purporting to extend the scope of the civil service.

Senator Byrd recently sharply criticized those sections of the Senate reorganization bill which would leave the President free to decide what positions should be classified as policy-making and hence filled by appointment. Safeguards against possible abuse of the appointive power should certainly be inserted in any bill designed to extend and strengthen the principles of the merit system. That can be done by carefully defining and delimiting the scope of the President's powers to appoint, and the Senate's concurrent right of ratification.

"Means To An End."

Some constructive thoughts in the Topeka address of Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the National Republican Program Committee, were obscured by his strained efforts to tar the New Deal with fascism. At one point in his speech he urged the G. O. P. to "take advantage of its position as a minority party to think through and reduce to clear and compelling statements" its approach to political problems. But in the next sentence he proved that he had not followed his own advice.

The theme of Dr. Frank's remarks seems to have been that the Republican Party should adopt a realistic policy sensitive to human needs and expressive of the American spirit. That is good common sense. But apparently Dr. Frank wants the G. O. P. to be realistic only on the positive side of its program. In the critical portion of his speech he threw discrimination to the winds and accused the New Deal of sponsoring fascistic measures which "threaten to Hitlerize what was once democratic self-government." Loose and exaggerated charges of this sort are scarcely an effective way to convince the public of the G. O. P.'s devotion to realism.

In a much happier vein was Dr. Frank's assertion: "The Republican Party is not an end in itself. It is but a means to an end." During the long period in which the Republicans held the reins of government prior to 1933 there was a tendency among some to place party objectives ahead of the national welfare. If its recent adversity has taught the G. O. P. to reverse this order, its prospects of a comeback will certainly be improved.

According to a cycle which seems fairly well established, 1938 is a peak year for measles. And when you get the measles, all you can do about 'em is to have 'em.

Businessman's Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in your issue of January 26 that President Roosevelt and John Lewis predict the worst if wages are reduced. President Roosevelt states that he opposes wage cuts and that if price cuts necessitate wage cuts, or are based on wage cuts, they are wrong.

Costs of commodities are based on wages and the productivity of labor, and are in accordance with sound economic laws. If persons who have no business experience think they can defy these laws, they should take some of their own money and try to reverse the order of some sound economic laws, but not to try to do this at the expense of the public treasury.

Someone who has only earned money by the use of a pick and shovel in a coal mine is always ready to tell a businessman who has created employment and made this country a great Nation, in which its laboring people may live, just how he should run his business and how much taxes he can afford to pay, what wages he must pay and hours his employes should work.

I am in favor of a fair wage and reasonable working hours and conditions, and I am of the opinion that what this country needs is for everyone to work a reasonable number of hours a week and produce an abundance of everything, so that the consuming public can afford to buy it and so that a dollar would have some purchasing value.

If we want a proper distribution of wealth in our country, we should create a law taxing excess profit, to apply after a reasonable income is permitted. This would eliminate the contentions of labor and the Government that industry is profiteering, or depriving the workers of a fair wage. Then finance the Government on a general manufacturers' sales tax, which would give every citizen a part in the support of his Government.

Why Blame The Pets?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this column under date of January 26 there appeared an article by R. C. Smithson, of New York City, pointing out that a large number of families in the United States were housing and pampering, in the lap of luxury, dogs and cats while a fairly large percentage of our good Americans were being deprived of food and shelter. He suggested that such pets be displaced and the owners take in children or whole families.

It is most unfortunate that social-economic conditions in this country are such that a large number of families find themselves in poverty, without food, shelter or work. But why cast out the pets, or blame them for this condition? Unquestionably the situation would not be relieved by taking in their stead children or whole families. Think of the many worries and perplexing predicaments this would cause. Chances are that some of the kiddies or families who might be taken in would want to bring along Towser, Tabby, the pet canary, parrot or even a turtle.

It is a little too far-fetched to bring the pets into this dilemma of depression and recession; economic co-operation of all forces would be a tremendous aid toward relieving the situation in this land of plenty and home of the free where the necessities of existence should be abundant.

Beauty Shop Regulation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On June 14 of last year, the House of Representatives passed H. R. 6869, the purpose of which is to regulate beauty parlors in the District of Columbia. This bill is now resting in the Senate District Committee awaiting final action.

Here is a measure so important that its delay may affect many living in the District. Allow me to relate my personal experience:

Some six weeks ago I was called at my office by a prominent physician in this city, who told me that my wife was at the present time at his office and had lost the sight of one of her eyes, through an accident which happened in one of the more prominent beauty parlors. Through gross carelessness and faulty apparatus the entire cornea of the eye was burned. After many anxious days in the hospital a part of the vision came back. There exists at the present time no law or regulation of any kind which compels this incorporated beauty shop to carry insurance, a bond or any kind of responsibility. Needless to say that this shop has no insurance to cover personal injuries.

This same accident might happen to any woman in the District.

Col. Roosevelt's Lot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a military man of wide experience, in peace and in war, in Regular and Reserve forces, I feel chagrined to read that the suddenly-made Lieut. Col. Roosevelt, who already has been decorated by a foreign power (for what?), and whose first active tour took him to the Caribbean, is now scheduled to make another active duty tour, during which he will visit Cuba and Panama by air.

I have served some 26 years, 15 in the Reserve, and I am only a major. In order for me to get a camp tour, always near home, I have to attend assemblies all year and also take correspondence courses. Even then, I only achieve camp every two or three years.

The authorities are not playing the game according to merit. I can say without the remotest fear of contradiction that young Roosevelt is going to do, at Federal expense, what no other person in any of our Reserve forces could do under any circumstances. What an example!

Vivisection Bill Hearings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having today attended the hearing in the Capitol on the anti-vivisection bill, it was surprising to me how the cruelties to which the victims of the vivisectors are subjected were allowed to be covered up by the witnesses in its favor.

The opposition was allowed to confine itself to the minor cruelties, omitting the experiments of which the horror is recorded by photographs and illustrations on record.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In respect to "Latin America's Pulse," by Peter Thicket, the article voices the opinion of 99 per cent of the men who have lived long years in Latin America and know and understand the situation.

This article has so inspired me that once again I am going to renew a fight that for 20 or more years with the limited means at hand I have waged against Republicans and Democrats who are afraid to raise their heads too high or to take a step forward for fear of treading on someone's toes. And how some of those toes need stamping on!

Hoover and his men have the outstanding record of 112 cases solved out of 114 actual cases since the passage of the Federal kidnaping statute in June, 1932. In this same connection 255 persons have been convicted.

The Seating Of Senator Milton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to present a statement which is at variance with the views expressed by Franklyn Waltman concerning the investigation into the seating of Senator Milton of New Jersey.

Mr. Waltman contends that, "Not only would such a procedure constitute a precedent but it would constitute a precedent which would greatly jeopardize representative government."

Here is what the United States Constitution says:

"Article I, Section 5—Powers of Each House—(17) Each house shall be judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members . . ."

"(18) Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the consent of two-thirds, expel a member."

The thread which seems to permeate Mr. Waltman's article is that if no fraud be shown as to the method of obtaining his seat, the Senate is precluded from inquiring into any other objection to his membership. Webster's Dictionary defines "qualified" as: "Fitted; competent; fit; as, qualified for office."

The Constitution is our pattern for representative government. As quoted above, it stipulates that the Senate shall inquire into the qualifications of its members. Not to do so would, in itself, jeopardize representative government, and not the reverse, as Mr. Waltman contends.

Personally, I seem to see an attempt of one group to parade before public gaze Mr. Milton's putative unsavory affiliation with Mayor Hague, and another to sidetrack or ignore the matter. However, the provisions of the Constitution are above the bickerings of both elements. The Senate is obligated to the people of the Nation to see that the ethical standards of its members are above reproach.

E. P. McDEVITT.
Bethesda, Md., Jan. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post there appeared an editorial entitled, "Jersey City's Dictator," in which it is proposed that the Senate investigate the record of Senator Milton, of New Jersey. I was glad to observe in your issue of January 25 that one of your own feature writers, Mr. Waltman, had clearly and convincingly refuted the specious reasoning of the writer of the editorial in question.

I do not understand, and I know others among your readers who do not understand, just why The Post is so partial to the C. I. O. Now, no fair-minded person contends that all the virtue is on one side or that only one side is to blame, but one would gather as much from the editorial policy of The Post, just as much as he would from the grossly partisan reports of the so-called Senate Civil Liberties Committee, or the press releases of Madame Perkins.

Regardless of what their shortcomings may be, this country needs more public officials like Mayor Hague, Gov. Davey, and the Mayors of Johnstown, Pa., and Monroe, Mich. And, over and above all, if there had been at the head of this Government a man with the courage and conviction of Premier Hepburn, of Ontario, it is fair to assume that we would have been spared the riots and the bloodshed which will always remain as a blot upon the record of the Administration which by its own acts and policies invited them.

The Post Impressionist

"When The Lamp Is Shattered . . ."

I HAD spent the afternoon in the library doing some avid cramming for an approaching exam on Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. Emerging from that haven of study just as the evening lights were turned up, I paused briefly to scan the scene about me.

Over the campus—now blanketed by a deep snow—the shadows of evening were swiftly falling. Students with books under arm passed here and there along the footpaths. The tall, red brick university buildings, supported by white sentinel columns, stood resplendent and serene, gazing down upon the peaceful setting with complacent eye.

Off to the right a blue-violet haze of mountains blotted out with graceful stroke what lay beyond. To the left the little student town was preparing for the tasks of the night-time. Smoke rose lazily from relic chimneys, and I knew that descendants of ancient families were grouping themselves about the dinner-table. An early winter moon was peeping up over the foothills. I stood fascinated, watching its gradual ascendancy until, finally breaking loose from a tenacious pine, it soared majestically into the heavens.

It was getting late, and I knew the servants were busy setting the evening meal at the fraternity house. My way passed along dormitory row—a street flanked by freshman living quarters. Shouts and laughter and the sound of splashing shower water mingled to form the buzz that always surrounded these buildings. Room lights flashing off and on—cries of "I'll meet you at the house," "Hurry up, Jones, we've just got time for a beer," or "Where the hell do you think you're going with my last white shirt?" I smiled to myself, remembering with inward warmth the days of my carefree neophytic existence. Seniorship, indeed, was a solemn business.

Suddenly, behind me I heard a commotion and a dormitory door flung open, a group of eight or ten freshmen bursting forth and rushing toward a car parked across the way. In the center of the crowd, four boys carried an outstretched form. "More monkey-shines," I thought. "What's up?" I asked of a breathless lad at my side—"Taking him to the creek?"

He looked at me with wide, staring eyes.

"That was Stewart. He just swallowed a whole bottle of carbolic acid."

* * *

No one could imagine why he had committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid in his little dormitory room. Young, handsome, popular, wealthy—he had chosen to snuff out his own life, while thousands and thousands of less fortunate youths went onward.

The campus seemed unusually quiet that night as the news of the tragedy spread. Freshmen stayed at the fraternity house until late, shunning the dormitories. No remote groups on Main street, no beer-drinking at Joe's or Spike's. Several of us huddled about the fireplace in the living room and talked—those who had known him best could offer no solution. He had been a good student—perhaps read too much poetry—whispered suggestions—none plausible.

* * *

Funeral services were held in the school chapel. His family was there. The father—tall, gray-templed, misty-eyed; the mother—small, well-groomed, weeping—the little sister and brother with clasped hands, perhaps too young to cry. Six fraternity brothers carried the casket gently down the aisle as the chaplain slowly repeated the dead youth's favorite line: Shelley's "When the lamp is shattered . . ."

That afternoon I handed in what was practically a blank on my Chaucer exam. After dinner, Prof. Duncan called me and asked me to meet him in his office.

I found him sitting behind a desk piled with papers.

"You wanted to see me, sir?"

"Come in." His words seemed muffled in the shadowy gloom of the tiny room.

As I closed the door—"Your Chaucer paper was surprising, to say the least. I can't understand a man with your high average failing so dismally." He paused expectantly. "Have you any explanation?"

I shook my head. "No, sir."

He rose hesitantly, with a creaking note of displeasure from the swivel chair, and walked to the window. He pulled back the curtain gently and for several silent moments stared down the slope to where the chapel stood on the opposite side of the campus. His fine face was silhouetted against the sky, long white hair flowing back from his high forehead, horn-rimmed glasses resting comfortably on the bridge of his long, pointed nose.

He suddenly dropped the curtain and turned toward his desk. Taking out a worn black grade-book, he marked clearly in a small square beside my name—"Excused, illness."

He looked up at me over his glasses.

"This is between the three of us," he said. "You may go."

Fair Enough

Bill Terry's Plaint.

BILL TERRY, of the New York Giants, has authored a magazine story in which he pricks a blister. He accuses the baseball writers of persecution and gullible and lazy journalism, and as one who knows the business from sufficient experience I readily agree with him, reserving the right, however, to extend my remarks as follows:

PEGLER.

A few baseball writers have caused the whole craft to be known facetiously as the laziest lot alive, a bunch more weary than night watchmen, utility outfielders, third-base umpires and city firemen. There is more truth than fiction in the story of the baseball journalist who rose up in his place in the first inning of the opening game of the year, yawned, stretched, blinked and mumbled, "I wish the season was over." We all know of the one who traveled half way across the country with a hot club to cover a crucial series and then covered it off a dashboard radio in an automobile as he tooled around the suburbs. We know, too, of some who found their golf and swimming more urgent than personal coverage during the Florida training season and, therefore, took turns at the drudgery of watching the practice games in the grapefruit league.

* * * *

THESE ARE conspicuous examples, however, and their conduct, being spectacular in a certain way, is remembered to the neglect of steady, routine work by the conscientious reporting of the majority. Terry knows that, but he was pleading his own case as a man misunderstood, misused and unappreciated, and he has never been known to steal any corners from Bill Terry.

As to the gullibility of the sport side in dealing with baseball men, including Terry, my agreement goes even further. We print as news under war heads the most trivial business data of the baseball industry just from force of habit—a conspicuous example of which occurs today. This item has to do with the fact that Mel Ott, one of Terry's employes, has signed a contract for 1938. Ott is a well-regulated young man who always signs his contracts, and the fact of his signing as usual deserves no more attention than a grass fire in the outskirts. When Ott bites dog that will be news.

We also print as news, however, the interested and calculated remarks of baseball managers who hold winter-league audiences with the baseball writers and to our definite knowledge are using our columns to low-rate balky players, depress public opinion of them and thus beat down their terms. Terry refers to a case in his own career when John McGraw wouldn't give him his price and was able to spread before the public his judgment that Terry was overrated and wouldn't be missed if he did quit. I agree that that was an abuse, but I remember that I said so at the time, pointing out that Terry, back home, had no such access to the papers for his side of the story.

* * * *

TERRY at this time makes the same point as though it were original with him. I have never bothered to accuse any of our sweaty literati of brain-picking, and I wouldn't trouble to do so now except that Terry reveals a fierce interest in his social security, and I want to offer him a chance to bolster it. Therefore I will state that I was the first author of the idea which he now presents as his, that it bears my cachet and that nobody ever offered the same idea before. And I will contribute $100 to Mr. Terry's social security if not, provided, however, that he will contribute $100 to mine if I am right.

As a matter of fact, of all the holdouts in baseball no man ever was spoken up for as angrily by the press as Bill Terry was when McGraw was trying to use the papers to chisel his salary. He didn't mention this, but he and McGraw are much alike in many ways, and I wouldn't expect him to give the baseball writers any more credit than McGraw gave him.

To ridicule and discredit the baseball writers' clairvoyance and expertness Terry recalls that they used extravagant words to describe his team which won the pennant in 1933 by contrast with their gloomy predictions in April. But, again, I will take Mr. Terry to the files and show where he himself, the manager of the team, expected to finish somewhere around fourth that year.

On the score of gullibility I have to agree entirely, and seriously propose that under a new dispensation every statement of his be checked and verified for motive and accuracy and that all mention of him be judged strictly for its value as news. Would that be okay, or would that be persecution?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"No More Overselling."

(The scene is the office of any big motor company on the early afternoon of a boom.)

General Manager—Well, how're things?

Sales Director—Pretty good.

General Manager (alarmed)—I hope they're not too good.

S. D.—The demand for our cars is very heavy, sir.

G. M.—It's just what I was afraid of; we're getting too big a response from that last advertising campaign.

S. D.—It certainly is selling cars, boss.

G. M. (sternly)—Somebody will have to be disciplined for this. You know how I have emphasized the slogan of this company.

S. D.—What slogan?

G. M.—"Think Twice Before You Buy a Whoopie!"

* * * *

S. D.—Maybe we'd better change it to three times.

G. M.—It hasn't kick enough. It still isn't a slogan that kills the demand for our cars. We need something stronger. How about "Buy a Whoopie Only as a Last Resort!?"

S. D.—Either that or "Before You Buy a Whoopie Be Sure You Can Afford It!"

G. M.—That's better. We've got to avoid getting too many orders. How's that radio drive going? I hope it's a flop.

S. D.—It's a big hit. We sold 25,000 cars the first week of our new air program.

G. M. (indignantly)—I told you from the first that a radio hour would be a mistake. Who's on the program?

S. D.—Two symphony orchestras, three nationally famous comedians and two illustrious Hollywood actresses.

G. M. (now running a fever)—Fire them at once and get a hillbilly band, a bum tenor and cut the hour to 15 minutes. We MUST take every precaution against getting a favorable Nation-wide reaction.

S. D.—We can't fire the performers but maybe we can just run the program and not say anything about our automobile.

G. M.—That's it! Warn everybody against mentioning our product. If they must mention something let them mention a rival car. We can't afford to get in wrong with Roosevelt.

* * * *

* * * *

Production Manager—You sent for me, sir?

G. M.—Yes. What are our production figures?

P. M.—We produced and distributed 4,600 cars last month. This month, with three days to go, we have produced and distributed 4,652 cars.

G. M. (enraged)—A gain of 52 cars! Do you want to ruin us?

(The phone rings. A secretary answers it.)

Secretary—It's the Blotz agency. They want to know if we can rush them 10 more cars this week.

G. M. (dejectedly but firmly)—No. Ask him what he did with those five we sent him a month ago.

(Curtain amid the chaos.)

Paris Letter

Peace Of Europe Seen To Hang On Ability Of France To Maintain Unity Among Her Divided Populace.

By Europax,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

TO A DISTURBINGLY great degree, European peace now depends on what happens in France. And almost anything may happen at any moment in France.

Watching the recent French political crisis at close range, in the Chamber of Deputies and in the streets of Paris, I was struck by two things. One was the casual acceptance by a great many French political leaders that war this year is inevitable. The other was the equally general and certain conviction of the "man in the street" that revolution is imminent.

Neither of these assumptions, in my opinion, is necessarily correct. But neither can be dismissed as out of the question or even as altogether improbable. And certainly—here parliamentarians and Parisians agree—internal strife in France would almost surely be followed at once by international conflict in Europe.

The change of government that has just occurred, from one Chautemps cabinet to another Chautemps cabinet, settled nothing. It was simply a curtain-raiser, significant but completely indecisive. There may be another change before this has time to appear in print. The French political, social and economic situation remains uncertain, delicate, and in fact, dangerously explosive.

Recent Crisis Ended Popular Front Coalition.

THE RECENT CRISIS was very important in one respect: It brought to an end—provisionally at least—the Popular Front coalition of Communists, Socialists and Radicals which governed France for more than a year and a half. The present cabinet not only does not include any Socialist ministers, but it is not dependent upon the support or approval of the 70-odd Communist deputies in the chamber, as were both its predecessors.

From the financial and monetary viewpoint, this is a big advantage. The flight of capital from France, which precipitated the downfall of both the Popular Front governments, was due primarily to apprehension over the presence of Marxists in the cabinet and "Reds" in the parliamentary majority. It is now an open secret, also, that former Ambassador to Washington, Georges Bonnet, after paying back one British loan of £40,000,000 (mostly with money borrowed from Switzerland and Holland), was refused a second credit of £30,000,000 so long as he was tied to the Communists by the Popular Front coalition. With this inconvenient link broken, it will be much easier to obtain credit abroad and to restore it at home.

But on the social side, the position is far more difficult. By thrusting the Communists into the opposition and excluding the Socialists from the cabinet, the breakdown of the Popular Front regime has set the stage for an increase in the social agitation and class strife which is already smoldering sullenly just beneath the surface in France.

This class war has flared up lately, not only in a widespread recrudescence of strikes, but in the picturesque form of the "Cagoulards"—the "Hooded Ones," a secret anti-Communist organization, whose real name is equally evocative, the C. S. A. R., or secret committee for revolutionary action (Comite Secret d'Action Revolutionnaire).

One is tempted, of course, to compare the Cagoulards with the American Ku Klux Klan. But the comparison does not hold water. There is no evidence, in the first place, that the French secret society ever actually made use of hoods such as the Klan wear. And furthermore, the Cagoulards or C. S. A. R. are a much more specifically para-military organization. It is not absolutely certain yet whether their purpose was, as they claim, confined to defense of the republic against a Communist revolution, or whether they planned a Fascist revolution of their own. Recent discoveries and alleged confessions seem to point rather to the latter.

Cagoulards Demonstrate Depth Of Class Division.

THE CAGOULARDS reveal the depth and intensity of class war in France, tending here as elsewhere to take the form of a conflict between "fascism" and "communism." When thousands of naturally peace-loving, individualistic French citizens are willing to enroll themselves with solemn secret oaths into highly regimented bands, and to spend huge sums of money amassing hidden stores of arms; machine guns, automatic rifles, pistols, grenades, amunition and explosives—then something is up.

Beyond doubt the French Communist Party has hidden arms, just as the "Fascists" have theirs. Whether they would try to put across a "coup" in the face of the army is another matter. What is certain is that there is a large and growing extremist element, not only in the Communist Party and the C. G. T., but in the Socialist Party as well, which is champing at the bit to throw overboard all patient progress through the polls and parliament, and seize power for the proletariat at once. If these extremists were to launch such a movement, as they did the sit-down strikes in June, 1936, could the responsible party chiefs and labor leaders restrain, check and control it any more than they did the tidal wave of French sit-downs?

At all events, even discounting the possibility of a Communist "putsch," the working people and poorer middle classes in France are on the point of revolt for a very concrete reason: High prices.

Official statistics — government controlled and understated so as to avoid stirring up the populace—show an increase of 40 per cent in living costs over the last 18 months. For the past two years, the increase is nearly 50 per cent. But the housewife in Paris who goes to market is paying for most of her food twice what she paid a year ago, nearly three times what she paid two years ago, before Blum' social reforms such as the 40-hour week, started prices soaring. No wonder the French people—particularly in Paris where the price increase has been greatest—are proclaiming vehemently with typically expressive French gestures: "This can't go on!" No wonder the workers—their salary increases of 1936 more than swallowed up by ever-soaring cost of living—are in a belligerent mood and easily persuaded to strike by labor agitators.

Unhappily French industry, on the whole, is not in any position to meet demands for increased pay. The reason is the sharp drop in production caused, in part, by the application of the 40-hour week, and in part by the slowing down of production during working hours.

Employer-Employe Split Only One Sign Of Unrest.

MEANTIME, relations between employer and employes, between capital and labor, are severely strained. Unemployment is increasing—especially part-time unemployment—and there is an 18,000,000,000 franc deficit in the trade balance, as against only 9,000,000,000 for 1936. Armaments are absorbing every centime the State can borrow at home or abroad, and interest rates are so high—6 and 7 per cent where other countries are paying 1½ or 2—that interest on the national debt alone takes up more than half the budget. The franc has dropped to half what it was two years ago—one-tenth its prewar value.

In such circumstances, anything might happen. Leon Blum himself, speaking to the national council of his party, openly warned the Socialists against an aggressive attitude which would entail "a general strike, followed perhaps by a reaction to fascism."

The staid and unsensational Temps wrote recently:

"If the Marxist ultimatum is obeyed the regime under whice we live will keep up appearances for a time, but in reality it will be irrevocably condemned. "The dictatorship of the proletariat and a state ou totalitarian lines will come within the sphere of practical politics."

Yet, in the midst of all this uncertainty, one fact is clear: Civil strife in France would invite war in Europe. With France out of the diplomatic picture, could Germany resist the temptation to strike in central Europe? Would Itlay let slip her chance to act in the Mediterranean, perhaps in the Balearics, perhaps even in Tunisia? And might not France herself become another Spain, another international battleground, with Italy and Germany helping the "anti-reds' and Russia backing the "Popular Front," while Britain constituted another non-intervention committee!

It is this prospect—sometimes one is tempted to think it is only this prospect—that keeps the French situation from exploding. It may well be that the lesson of Spain's tragic experience will be the salvation of France. It is not too late for Frenchmen of left and right, "red" Communists to fascist conservatives, to unite to pull their country out of the economic and financial morass into which it has drifted. Such a political unity and social solidarity is essential if peace is the be preserved in France and Europe.

At West Point

By Janet Deitrick

Miseries, Splendors Of The Cadet.

IF "WEST POINT TODAY" had been written by Cadet William Calvin Banning instead of merely being dedicated to him by his civilian father, it could hardly have been more authentic or more seemingly a labor of love. In spite of the author's "grateful acknowledgements," this engrossing record of cadet life is far more than the result of research. It is the work of a man who has lived vicariously all of a cadet's rigors and joys.

Everything anyone could want to know about West Point is here, and the civilian who may think he isn't interested in the subject will find himself fascinated by Mr. Banning's easy style, and his chatty peppering of anecdotes assure that. Who would not delight, for instance, in the occasion when an officer tied his horse to the official uniform-signal flagstaff and the horse ate the overcoat flag, thereby threatening with pneumonia the entire corps of cadets?

* * * *

THE FIRST CHAPTERS, dealing with what happens to the stunned plebe during "Beast Barracks" and that whole mettle-testing first year may leave bad tastes in the mouths of some readers and a taste for civil life in the minds of young men contemplating the Point. There are few misfits in the Army, and Beast Barracks is the reason why. Its purpose is to weed out without ado those who can't stand the gaff.

Hazing is supposedly taboo at the Military Academy, yet it is difficult, says Mr. Banning, to convince the new cadets that their tormentors, selected for their disciplinary duties by the tactical department, are not hazers, and "it is difficult, for that matter," admits the author, "to draw a clear-cut line of demarcation at all times between hazing and discipline." It is difficult, too, to analyze the attitude of Kendall Banning, father, toward the treatment of plebes. In his effort to persuade his reader that the man-molding process is right, one somehow feels that he is likewise comforting himself.

Even though the cadet weathers his first year, his succeeding three call for many continued sacrifices of pride and personal right in behalf of his coveted commission. He is penalized for returning a book late to the library, for attempting to send a telegram without permission, for contracting a debt without authority, for dating a paper incorrectly, for having a penny in his pocket or an ornament in his room. He risks being called before the dread "Bat Board" and even dismissed in disgrace for returning from a hop more than five minutes late, for "circulating gossip," for sitting in a parked car (just sitting, anywhere). He is given demerits and other punishments, including dismissal from the Academy, for deficiency in studies; but he is likewise punished for trying to stretch his limited study period and "boning" by flashlight under covers after Taps at 10 p. m.

THE DOUBTFUL STATEMENTS which the Army mind may note in this book are negligible. The war class of '98, for instance (this reviewer's father was a member), was not graduated in June, but in April. Rather than errors, the Army mind notes omission of detail amid an abounding wealth of detail. The civilian reader, for example, would surely have rejoiced to learn that plebes, at "recognition," may boot their harassers of the past year. In discussing academic West Point, Mr. Banning might have given his views on the moot question as to whether the Academy constitutes a college education for the man who later resigns. In telling of its professors and instructors he might have revealed the interesting fact that all are Army officer graduates, not trained as teachers.

* * * *

He explains much cadet slang as he goes along, yet fails to clarify the easily explained "found," and a very significant item, omitted, is that all slang and the sophomoric quizzings by upper classmen and the plebe's rote responses are down in black and white in the official handbook of the corps of cadets. It would have been in keeping with Mr. Banning's humor to mention the cadet hospital's impressively equipped maternity ward. Certainly one must question the adjective "ribald" when applied to West Point's songs.

* * * *

BUT THESE COMPLAINTS against a work of such amazing scope and general accuracy are inconsequential. Let United States citizens on a wide scale find a treasure in this unusual book, which is as interesting as good fiction and informative as Baedeker. Above all, let young men considering the Military Academy read it. Its first two chapters probably won't keep them out of West Point any more than war books will keep them out of war.

The Story Of Lloyds

By Mercer Smith

ALTHOUGH "LLOYD'S" is a byword the world over, few persons really know much about the history of that vast insurance empire. But now Mr. Ralph Strauss has written it with all the sympathy of a biographer, recognizing in Lloyd's the personality of a single and unique character.

Mr. Strauss has carefully selected from the vast amount of material placed at his disposal a nice balance of anecdotal gossip and historical fact. Unimportant perhaps, in the evolution of the great Lloyd's, but of interest are such matters as the origin of the term, "A-1." This was a code used in classifying the state of repair of ships registered at Lloyd's. Of more importance and equally as interesting is the account of the initiative taken by Lloyd's in the development of seaworthy lifeboats.

The narrative is well sustained and easily followed from the days of Edward Lloyd's first coffee house in Tower street through the period when Lloyd's was in "exile," living in borrowed quarters, and up to the final stage inaugurated in 1928 when King George V declared open the present imposing building in Leadenhall street. Step by step Mr. Strauss traces the evolution of Lloyd's from nothing more than an assembling place for shipping people to the great corporation which now owns a site in the center of London that is second in size only to that of the Bank of England.

Mr. Strauss has written the history with enthusiasm for his subject, but also with objectivity. He makes no effort to excuse the poor judgment of certain of Lloyd's masters, or later, chairmen, nor does he overglorify the famous men of Lloyd's such as John Julius Angerstein and Joseph Marryat.

"LLOYDS: THE GENTLEMAN AT THE COFFEE HOUSE," by Ralph Strauss. (Carrick and Evans, $3.75.)

Good Earth

Correspondence courses may not make good detectives, but they can make good gardeners. A silver cup has been awarded to a "sister-team" who completed correspondence courses in gardening and proved their skill by cultivating a half-acre plot during the past summer. The girls, 17 and 16 years old, are students of the New York State College of Agriculture.

And what these students accomplished will encourage many people to supplement their means of living by tilling a piece of ground. On the half-acre the two girls grew 26 kinds of vegetables. They had 84 bunches of asparagus, 6 bushels of beets, 200 heads of lettuce, four bushels of parsnips, 360 peppers, 200 bunches of radishes, 35 dozen sweet corn, 15 bushels of tomatoes and good yields of the other crops. The produce was valued at $147.50.

Small Talk—Thanks To The Readers.

THE READER who suggested that an occasional Monday morning column of small talk might not be out of place came through but shortly afterward with a report of an intriguing conversation with a Filipino cab driver, whose car door bore the name S. Lindain.

McCARTHY.

Having noted Senator Borah sitting alone, and peacefully preoccupied, in the triangular park at the junction of Connecticut avenue and Kalorama road, he mentioned the Senator's solitary presence to his cab driver, as he entered.

"See him there every day," the cab driver replied. "He there every good day."

There was a small silence until the cab driver volunteered further information.

"Mr. Borah—great man," he testified, and then added, nodding understandingly over his shoulder, "Everybody knows him . . . the Idaho Potato!"

NOW that the President's birthday ball has been duly celebrated and survived, it might be well to note a really touching grasp of the niceties of etiquette as exhibited by one meticulous member of the ball committee.

In the hand-lettered advance sheet of the committee note was made of the expected times of arrival of the various stars at the hotels and theaters. It was stated that Fredric March and Florence Eldridge would arrive at the Wardman Park at 11 p. m., that Joe E. Brown could be counted on to arrive in Alexandria at 9, and that Zorina could be looked for at the Shoreham at 1:50.

But the advance chart exposed a startling delicacy in the section reserved for the time of arrival and departure at the White House. There, Fredric March became Mr. March, Joe E. Brown of the ear-destroying howl became Mr. Brown, and ballerina Zorina was accorded a listing as Miss Zorina.

Only Ken Murray's stooge, Oswald, escaped the dignifying process.

Mr. Murray's stooge was accorded a paranthesis, but remained plain Oswald. Which possibly indicates the trend in that branch of etiquette devoted to stooges.

Alarming part of the whole thing, should the chart have been publicly exhibited, lay in the fact that the Carlton Hotel alone shared with the White House the distinction of having its visiting stars listed in the advance chart as Mr. and Miss.

But, it is understood that no political capital should be made of that fact even though the Carlton is the normal residence of J. P. Morgan during his sojourns in the Capital.

The underlying philosophy was, probably, that the Carlton's gold-plate breakfast of scrambled eggs and sausage at $25 per plate rated at the very least the additional honor of a Mr. or a Miss before the star's name.

AN ACQUAINTANCE who divides his time and salary between a desultory study of humanity and an unflagging devotion to foreign foods reports a dramatic incident which threatened to disrupt the service in a small Russian restaurant on Connecticut avenue, near Florida avenue.

He reports that there was nothing peculiar about the couple at the window table except an almost supernatural concentration. And while the man had what is described as an intellectual face, the girl was more than the average in prettiness. But no less lacking in concentration.

At first our observer held the impression that they might have been members of some religious cult invoking strange gods, as their eyes bored into the table and they spooned Russian bortsch toward their mouths most mechanically.

He was somewhat relieved to discover that they were playing chess with a miniature board while they ate. The game progressed in a tense silence which after a while reflected in the hushed tones of the other customers in the restaurant.

For the record, he happily reports that while the bortsch course seemed to find the players in a stalemate, with the arrival of the entree the game progressed with something akin to sprightliness.

A PUZZLED reader has informed that sitting on the right side of the loge in the Loew's Capitol Theater she has been subjected to a creepy phenomenon which has all but caused her to consult a nerve specialist.

Her stanch claim is that she hears nothing but double-talk in that section of the theater. The words, she reports, come twice from the screen with a clarity which rules out echo.

Investigation of this mysterious phenomenon has disclosed that our reader was in no sense exaggerating.

Mr. Charles Kurtzman, who manages the house, informs that the puzzled lady had inadvertently seated herself in the section of loge which is equipped with devices to aid the hard-of-hearing.

Mr. Kurtzman claims that his house is the only major one in the East so equipped. He notes that when 10 or 15 of the hearing devices are in use sufficient sound escapes from the amplifying earphones to disconcert regular patrons seated nearby.

The hearing devices are earphones very similar to those used on old-time radio receiving sets but powered for greater amplification.

OVERHEARD—In one of those double-deck hashhouses, where orders are called through a raspy amplifier from the second floor to the steam table on the first: "One coffee, big boy. One apple a la mode . . . and phooey from me to you!"

At a reception for stars to appear at the various birthday ball celebrations: "How can I tell which ones are the big shots?" To which came the unimpressed reply, "Look for the guys with the unpressed pants."

And one reader submits that a reception is given for dignitaries who have something on the ball so that the would-be's who have nothing on the ball may attend to gain the comforting knowledge that they have much in common with the "big shots" . . . in that they both share a weakness for Manhattans.

60 U. S. Congressmen Praise Loyalist Parliament Session

A message of "good wishes" to the Spanish Parliament signed by 60 Senators and Representatives was delivered to the Spanish Embassy here yesterday, to be sent to the Parliament when it convenes in Barcelona tomorrow.

The message applauded the fact that the Parliament was meeting again in the "face of trying and tragic circumstances." Such a meeting, the message said, "demonstrates that the Spanish people and their representatives stand firm in their faith in democratic government."

Senator George McGill (Democrat), Kansas, one of the signers, said last night, "I feel it is to the interest of the Spanish people and to the interest of democratic government throughout the world that the Loyalists maintain their position.

"It is remarkable that the Parliament should convene under the present circumstances and they are showing a degree of courage not often displayed, in their support of democratic principles."

Senator John G. Townsend (Republican), Delaware, said that in signing the message, "my thought was that we should lend our support to strengthening all constitutional governments throughout the world." He added that he did not class Fascist governments as constitutional.

Others who signed the message included Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat) Virginia; Senator Warren R. Austin and Senator Ernest W. Gibson, both of Vermont.

Message Is Quoted.

Their message, addressed to the members of the Spanish Parliament, said:

"We, the undersigned members of the Congress of the United States, are happy to send our greetings and good wishes to the Spanish Parliament on the occasion of its regular session convened in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution of 1931.

"For you to meet again in the face of the trying and tragic circumstances of the present demonstrates that the Spanish people and their representatives stand firm in their faith in democratic government.

"We, who cherish freedom and democracy above all else, realize the significance of your heroic and determined fight to save democratic institutions of your young Republic from its enemies both within and without Spain.

"Your struggle sets a stirring example to all democratic peoples. As members of one democratically elected parliament to another, we salute you."

The Parliament, convening for the first time in Barcelona will hold its fifth session since the start of Franco's rebellion. Officials of the Spanish Embassy said that members of the British, French, Norwegian and other parliaments were expected to attend the opening session at Barcelona as a gesture to Spanish Democracy.

Heflin Leaves Hospital, Silent Over Candidacy

Lafayette, Ala., Jan. 30 (AP).—J. Thomas Heflin, frock-coated former Alabama Senator, left a hospital here today with a vow he'd "remain active in politics, just as always," but he wasn't certain whether it would be as candidate or private citizen.

Heflin, stricken Christmas Day by lobar pneumonia in the midst of a senatorial campaign, in which he was defeated by Lister Hill, of Montgomery, has been mentioned prominently as a prospective opponent of Representative Joe Starnes.

Bed-Ridden Youngsters Given Treat That Spells New Hope for Many

Birthday Ball dancers at the Willard may have eyed with longing this mountainous example of confectioner's art. But they couldn't have even one slice, for Mrs. Roosevelt insisted it be saved intact for young unfortunates. Next day Harry P. Somerville, manager of the Willard, carried it out to Children's Hospital. He's shown presenting it to Joan Gowan, 4, as Anna Lou Brady peeps hungrily through window in back. Anna Lou got her share, too, you may be sure.

'Flying Wing' Cracks Up in Test

This pusher-type, tailless airplane may revolutionize air transportation, its inventor claims. But in test flight at Cleveland it got off to a bad start with a crack-up. Jimmy Taylor, veteran test pilot, was uninjured.

Two-Year-Old Baby Beaten

This 2-year-old baby girl, tufts of hair pulled out, lips cut, nose smashed, was brought to a hospital in West New York, N. J. A woman with whom the child's unwed mother left her confessed the beating "when she did something I didn't like."

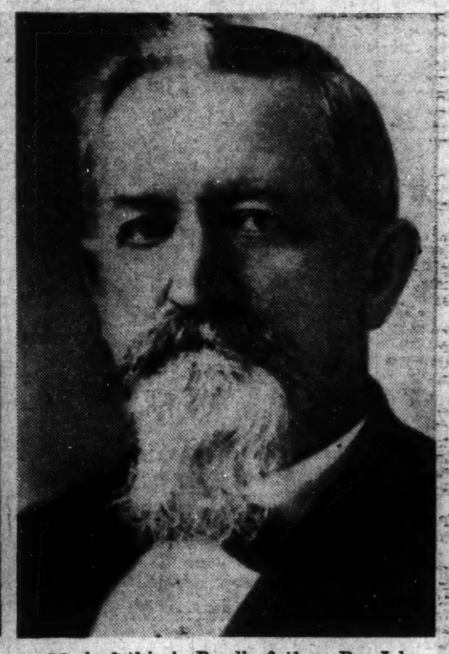
4 Stanley Reed's first nurse, now 83, is Mrs. Elizabeth (Mother) Perkins, of Minerva, Ky. Needless to say, she is proud of her former charge.



5 And this is Reed's father, Dr. John A. Reed, a physician at Minerva. He was educated at Johns Hopkins. The new Justice's mother was Frances Forman.

Mexican Band Promised for Folk Festival

Festival

Spanish and Mexican arts surviving in the El Paso region of Texas, he founded the guild and started the Tipica Orchestra just three and one-half years ago as a "beat-the-depression" measure.

The 175 musicians, dancers and artists in the first group came from the relief rolls. The venture, however, was on a let-us-help-ourselves basis and not a Government WPA idea.

"The Tipica Orchestra was an afterthought, used to lure tourists to the guild to buy products. It gave programs at the Union Station when trains came in and showed up in hotel lobbies when crowds were around. Its success was instantaneous, Harwell said.

More unusual and more typically "folk Mexican" than the 12-string guitar is the 18-string bandolones used by the Tipica group.

The bandolone probably originated with the Romans, Harwell said, and made its way to Mexico from Spain—where it had been modified by the Moorish influence. Today the instrument has passed out of use in Spain and survives only in Mexico and the portions of the United States where Mexican and Spanish influence is strong.

Like other musical instruments used by Mexicans, the bandolones are hand made. "Ordinarily," Harwell said, "when a Mexican wants a new instrument he goes down town and has it made up to suit him, bargaining for as many strings as possible."

Lost in Antiquity.

Origins of many selections played by the Tipica Orchestra are lost in antiquity. The little serenade called "Las Mananitas," as an illustration, was brought into Mexico by the Spanish conquerors and antedates them considerably, Harwell believes. He bases his belief on the first words of the song, which are:

Although modified by Spanish ideas, the dress worn by girls in the Tipica Orchestra is—strangely enough—basically Hindu, and goes by the name of China Poblana.

The legend covering its origin goes back to the days when Mexico received "luxuries" on boats reshipped from the port of New Orleans. Pirates operating in the Gulf of Mexico seized one boat and sailed to Mexico with the crew as captives. On the boat was a beautiful Hindu maiden—who was immediately purchased by a rich Spaniard living in Puebla.

Tales of the lovely maiden spread over the countryside. Since the East meant China in the minds of most Mexicans, she became known as China Poblana—which sounds much better in Spanish than it looks in English—and her dress was adopted by the natives who wished to be in style.

"I just learned that legend this summer, and I believe it is based in truth," Harwell said.

Cowboy Costumes.

Revolutionary songs sung by Pancho Villa and others are included in the Tipica repertoire. "La Cucaracha" and "Las Tres Pelonas" are two of the Villa favorites. The latter, which means "Three Bobbed Haired Women," was even more popular with Pancho Villa than the former, according to Harwell.

"La Cucaracha" as played by an American orchestra is nothing to compare with the real Mexican music, Harwell believes.

"The American jazz band cannot possibly play Mexican music, any more than the real Mexican can play jazz tunes. When he has finished with them, they are not the same.

"However much fire Mexican music may have, it is always played for the ear and not for the feet. Castanets and the guido, or gourd, supply the feet help," Harwell said.

Some extremely old mission music is played by the Tipica Orchestra. Since the first padres had to sing without benefit of musical instrument, some of the songs have been handed down in a form not known elsewhere in the world.

Harwell points out that in El Paso is the oldest continuous settlement in the United States.

A national folk festival is essential to preservation of folk ways, Harwell believes. "Otherwise, interest dies. Jazz was a long time reaching the Mexican, but its influence is now filtering into his tunes. Without festivals, the very old and many original contributions of the Mexican and Spanish culture to our country may be lost.

"And, in addition to that, we believe the rest of the Nation is entitled to hear and see what we have to offer. It goes over big. The Tipica Orchestra went to Canada last summer and was a sensation," he said.

Panther Stops School.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., Jan. 30.—Reports reached here today that a panther has been roaming the Chenoweth Creek section. Tracks have been seen and State game protectors are making an investigation. The Chenoweth School has been closed, parents being afraid to let children attend while the beast is at large.

WHAT CATHARTICS DO TO YOU!

Harsh pills and purgatives often over-stimulate your intestines . . . and leave them weak and listless.

If your constipation is of the common type that is due to insufficient bulk, there's a better way to treat it. Kellogg's All-Bran supplies the bulk you need. It absorbs moisture and softens like a sponge. This water-softened mass aids elimination. But All-Bran does still more. It contains vitamin B, . . . the vitamin that helps tone the intestinal tract.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran every day and drink plenty of water. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

'Girl in Brown' Hunted to Clear Hardy Shooting

Hardy

"have no right to reveal statements that I, as a witness, allegedly made to them."

According to Alexandria police, Hardy said he was in his car outside the George Mason Hotel when a man believed to be a panhandler approached him. Hardy is said to have refused the man's request for money, and then to have become angered when the "panhandler" slammed the car door. Police said Hardy claimed he jumped out of the car and ran toward the man, who then shot him in the hip and escaped. Hardy's condition is not serious.

Fight Is Reported.

Hardy told The Post yesterday that he had never seen the panhandler before, that the man was dressed in a gray overcoat and that he appeared to be a hitch-hiker. "He mumbled something to me," Hardy said. "I suppose he wanted money. After I refused, he shot me."

Police, however, reported that witnesses claimed the shooting followed a fight between the two men on the street outside the hotel, and that a woman had been with Hardy a few minutes earlier.

Asked about the police report quoting Hardy as saying a woman had been his companion shortly before the shooting, Hardy retorted: "Is that any crime?"

"I don't need vindication through the press," he asserted, as his wife and two of his three children stood by the bedside.

Hardy charged that as soon as he was taken to Alexandria Hospital, he asked that police be notified of the shooting. "It was an hour before they arrived," he indignantly stated. "They treated me as a guilty person."

Put Under Bond.

The attorney was ordered put under $500 bond as a material witness to the shooting. At Alexandria Hospital he was guarded, but no policeman was in evidence outside his room at Sibley yesterday.

Clarence Kennedy, 33, an undertaker, was questioned by police after Cain Jackson, colored, said a man jumped on the running board of Jackson's car a few minutes after the shooting, flourished a pistol and shouted, "I've just shot a man and I want to get out of town."

Police asserted, however, that Kennedy had established the fact that he arrived in Alexandria from Woodbridge, Va., 20 minutes after Hardy was wounded. They further stated that Hardy had failed to identify Kennedy as his assailant when the undertaker was brought before Hardy at Alexandria Hospital.

Robber Suspect Slain, Officer Shot in Gun Duel

Haleyville, Ala., Jan. 30 (AP).—A man sought on robbery charges was killed and a deputy sheriff was wounded seriously 3 miles east of here today in a gun battle.

The dead man was identified as George McHenry, about 35, wanted in Lowndes and Crenshaw Counties, Ala., to face charges of robbery and burglary. Deputy Sheriff Jim Long killed McHenry after the fugitive shot the officer in both legs.

Retired District Doctor Is Found Dead From Gas

The victim, Dr. James T. Eslin, was dead when an Emergency Hospital ambulance and police responded to a telephone call from Mrs. Eslin.

Mrs. Eslin told police she and her husband lived in the three-story house alone and had no relatives other than a nephew, Dr. M. P. Eslin, dentist, of 1800 K street northwest.

Virginia Slashes Prices of Liquor

Richmond, Va., Jan. 20 (AP).—The State Liquor Control Board will put into effect tomorrow sharp reductions in prices of all bottled in bond whiskies on its State dispensary lists and cut the price of three brands of whisky to $1.15 a quart and 60 cents a pint, the lowest quotation since the State control system began operating in 1934.

The lower prices are attributable generally to new stock coming of age, much of which has been put up since the repeal movement began, it was indicated.

The reductions in the bottled in bond whiskies will range up to $1.75 a quart on some of the higher priced brands.

Resolutions by the Board of Directors of

The National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association

at its 33rd ANNUAL MEETING
CHICAGO, JANUARY 4th, 1938

Relative to Proposed Reciprocal Trade Agreement with Czechoslovakia

WHEREAS at the regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association held in New York City, May 18th, 1937, subsequent to the announcement by the Secretary of State of contemplated negotiations of a Reciprocal Trade Agreement with the Government of Czechoslovakia, the staff of the Association was instructed to gather and compile data, and consult the Industry relative to possible effects on the American Shoe Industry of such reciprocal trade agreement;

AND WHEREAS, it was the opinion of the Board of Directors that any approach to the problem on the part of the Shoe Manufacturing Industry should be carefully and thoughtfully considered by the entire Industry, and the staff was therefore instructed to make reports to members of the Industry and others interested upon request for information, advising them of the progress of the investigation and findings, but not to enter into general publicity during such survey and study;

AND WHEREAS, the staff of the Association made such study and furnished such information over a period of more than six months, and despite numerous solicitations by the Trade and General Press for statements regarding the possible effect on the Shoe Industry of the contemplated Reciprocal Trade Agreement, the Officers and staff of the Association steadfastly declined to enter into any general publicity regarding the matter;

AND WHEREAS, the staff has followed the instructions of the Board of Directors carefully and diligently and prepared a formal survey of the situation, from which it was clearly apparent that the duty on Czechoslovakian shoes imported into the United States is lower than to any other country to which Czechoslovakia exports shoes; that the duties on such shoes imported into the United States are lower than the duty on any of the other thirty-one principal dutiable products imported into the United States from Czechoslovakia; that Czechoslovakia, with only one outstanding shoe manufacturer in that country enjoying practically a monopoly of shoe manufacture and distribution, actually exported to the United States during 1936 more shoes than all the manufacturers of the United States exported to all countries of the world; that imports from Czechoslovakia constitute a very large proportion of all imports of footwear at an average value per pair very much lower than the average pair value of shoes produced in the United States; that imports of shoes into the United States since 1928 have greatly exceeded our exports; that the latest available data from the Bureau of Internal Revenue show more than 57% of American Shoe Manufacturers with a deficit in operations, the net income of all shoe manufacturers as only 2.25% of gross income, the dollar volume of the Industry in 1935 as only 67% of 1929 although employing 98% of the workers employed in 1929 with annual wages totalling 77% of the payroll in 1929;

AND WHEREAS, at the meeting of the Board of Directors on October 1st, 1937, the Directors reviewed the formal study and survey hereinbefore mentioned and approved of its presentation and instructed the staff to further inform the Industry of its findings, to make formal news releases not earlier than one week after filing the Association's Brief with the Committee for Reciprocity Information, and to advise members, in response to the many protests, suggestions and inquiries received, to express their views to the Chairman of the Committee for Reciprocity Information in accordance with notices received from the Secretary of State;

AND WHEREAS, notwithstanding these facts, and despite the keen interest and many sincere protests on the part of the Shoe Industry, comments were made by officials and recorded in the Minutes of the Public Hearing, referring to "Organizing Drives, Lobbying, and Turning on the Heat" and during the Hearing regarding shoes the Secretary of State was quoted in the Public Press that "the State Department would not be bluffed by special interests";

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of Directors of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association at its 33rd Annual Meeting, in view of the foregoing, that the Board of Directors endorse the presentation of the Chairman of the Board and the President of the Association at the Public Hearing, which were previously carefully considered by the Board, and further that the Board of Directors approve the actions of its staff in supplying information as to the progress and results of its investigation to those interested, and referring those interested and protesting the inclusion of shoes as an item for negotiation in such trade agreement, to direct their protests to the Chairman of the Committee for Reciprocity Information;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the staff of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association be instructed to continue to acquaint shoe manufacturers, shoe workers, representatives in the Federal Government, and the general public, with the facts relative to exports and imports of shoes, and especially to conditions existing in Czechoslovakia as to wages and hours and exploitation of youth, which in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association, constitute unfair competitive advantages over the American Shoe Manufacturing Industry and are diametrically opposed to our American standards and the aims for industrial relations in the United States as expressed by the President of the United States;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that copies of these resolutions be printed with the names of Officers and Directors of the Association who individually and collectively endorse the same, with the names and addresses of their companies appended thereto, and sent to the Committee for Reciprocity Information, to all members of the Industry, and further to be officially published by the Association.

(Each member of the Board of Directors whose name is signed hereto, has individually approved of the Resolutions and has authorized his name to be so signed.)

Cummingses Entertain For Fredric Marches

When Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March, of Hollywood, arrived in Washington they brought with them a letter of introduction to the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings. The hospitable Cummingses immediately took them under their wing, had them as guests at their table at the President's Birthday Ball, and yesterday entertained for the visitors at a breakfast party at Ruthven, their estate on Tilden street.

Well known as a clever hostess, Mrs. Cummings specializes in these Sunday breakfasts, where people of note who visit the Capital are gathered together to meet some of the residents. Pancakes, sausages and other hearty foods form the menu, and conversation is general and stimulating.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings hope to get away next month for a stay in Florida. They had at first thought of going to Mexico City, but affairs of state keep Mr. Cummings nearer home.

Many Parties Held Yesterday

The Cummings breakfast was only one of many parties given yesterday in the Capital. The British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained at a small luncheon for Lord and Lady Stanley, who are visiting them for the week-end en route to Florida. Lord Stanley is the eldest son of the Earl of Derby, and his wife is a sister of the Duchess of Marlborough.

Mrs. Frank Letts was another luncheon hostess yesterday, and later in the afternoon many of her guests went on to the pleasant cocktail party given by Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr.

Culbertsons Entertain For Miss Trucco

A large proportion of the younger set went to 2101 Connecticut avenue yesterday afternoon for the cocktail party which the Misses Jane and Junia Culbertson gave in honor of Miss Graciela Trucco and her fiance, Dr. Fernando Illanes. Miss Trucco is the daughter of the Chilean Ambassador to Chile, will be a bridesmaid at her wedding February 18.

Yesterday the guest of honor wore a black frock, simply made, with a corsage of gardenias and violets at the waist. Her sisters, the Misses Marta and Rebeca Trucco, were also at the party.

Mrs. Culbertson received with her daughters, wearing a black frock trimmed in beige. Miss Junia was in black and turquoise, and her sister had chosen a wine-colored frock.

Most of the guests congregated in the dining room, others lingered in the sun parlor with its enormous brass brazier brought by the Culbertsons from Constantinople. Among those present were the three Misses Wang, charming daughters of the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang. Also from the Diplomatic Corps came the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter, Larry Bungardeanu and Mlle Nora de With, daughter of The Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With. Mlle. de With was wearing a red frock with hat to match.

Others in the company were Miss Olga Patterson, who will also be a member of the wedding party; Miss Dolly Corbin, Miss Vera Bloom, Miss Nancy Brereton, Miss Kitty DuBoise, in tweeds; Frank Walker, Henry Whitney, Miss Stellita Stapleton, who is entertaining at a cocktail party this afternoon for the young couple; Miss Betty Vandenberg, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg, and Miss Anne Holloway.

O.E.S. Will Hold Ball Tomorrow

Mrs. Robbins, Harry Schmidt to Be Honored at Fete at the Willard.

Mrs. Helen D. Robbins, grand matron, and Harry J. Schmidt, grand patron, will be honored by Naomi and Washington Centennial Chapters, O. E. S., with a reception and ball at the Willard Hotel tomorrow night.

Mrs. Robbins and Mr. Schmidt will entertain the matrons and patrons of 1938, their associates and other guests Saturday evening at Friendship Chapter Hall, 4511 Wisconsin avenue.

Bethlehem Chapter celebrated its forty-first birthday at the last meeting having as its honored guests Mrs. Robbins, Mr. Schmidt, Past Grand Matrons Mrs. Louise Kreglow, Mrs. Grace Kimmell, Mrs. Lena Stephenson and Past Grand Patrons Ernest Dulin, Frank Kimmell and Tom Landergren. The program included a vocal solo by Mrs. Marie C. Deal and a special birthday song written by William B. Severe.

The eighth annual banquet of the 1930 Association of Matrons and Patrons was held at the Admiral Club January 22, with over 100 members and guests present. The president, Past Matron Elviria Magdeburger, presided, and Past Patron Thomas W. Davis, vice president, acted as toastmaster.

Arrangements for the banquet were in charge of Past Matron Ethel H. Martin, chairman, assisted by Past Matrons Mae M. Smith, Evelyn F. Stoner, Gertrude Smith, Ruth N. Speaks and Kathryn Harvey.

Lafayette Lodge Chapter will have its annual dance and card party at Meridian Mansions, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest Saturday night. Mrs. Violet McQuay is chairman of the dance and Mrs. Teresa Campbell, of the card room.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stathes have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Billie Stathes, to Constantine Poulos, of Lynn, Mass. News of the betrothal was made known at a party last Thursday.

Capital Society Playing Active Role in Miami

Many Washingtonians Now Sojourning in Southern Resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett E. Rapley, of Washington, have as their guest at their home in the Florida resort their nephew, Charles McKenney.

Dr. John Oliver LaGorce, of Washington, associate editor of the National Geographic Magazine, had as his luncheon guests at Hialeah Park, Wednesday, Bernard F. Gimbel, of New York; Joseph Stephenson, of South Bend, Ind, and Alton Crawford. Mr. Gimbel is the house guest of Dr. and Mrs. La Gorce.

Col. and Mrs. Frank L. Hatch and Miss Cornelia Hatch, all of Washington, were luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Studebaker. Following luncheon they watched the races from Hialeah Club.

Attending the races together were G. C. Corcoran, of Washington, and James Kieren, of Floral Park, Long Island, N. Y.

Mrs. Bruce D. Smith has returned to her home in Coral Gables following a trip North where she visited friends in Washington. Her daughter, Miss Florence Fisher, is in Washington where she is a pupil of Mme. Fausta Mangarini, noted sculptress.

Col. and Mrs. Brady G. Ruttencutter are the house guests for a few weeks of Mrs. Harry Theodore Church.

Mrs. S. A. Berns, of Washington, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Klein at their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Smyth and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hooker, of Washington, are at the Alcazar.

Mrs. Philip F. Osthaus, Mrs. E. B. Brown and F. I. McEwen are other Washington visitors in Miami.

Group to Stage Three Playlets

Pen Women's Productions Set for Last Week in February.

The Laboratory Little Theater, of the District Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, will present three one-act plays the last week in February. These plays were chosen from the many plays submitted for the league's annual contest.

Mrs. Larz Anderson, whose play, "The Gold Madonna," was so successfully produced last year by the Laboratory Little Theater and directed by Rose Robison Cohen, is one of the three prize winners this year. "The Bridge of Rama," a religious play bordering on the fantastic, the scene of which is laid in India, bids fair to be the best of Mrs. Anderson's plays thus far. Colorful and interesting costumes will be drawn, in part, from Mrs. Anderson's private collection of orientalia.

"This Is Drama," a lively comedy by Dr. Emily Maxwell Maddox, and a tragedy, "For Honor," by Florence P. Kahn, complete the list of plays to be produced.

Three guest directors will handle the plays this year, the list including Yvonne Kushner, of the Washington Civic Theater; Elizabeth Sypher, of the drama group of the Washington Arts Club, and formerly director of the Portsmouth (N. H.) Little Theater, and Lillian Buller, formerly director of the Wellesley College Little Theater.

The plays will be rehearsed and presented in the league clubrooms in the Grafton Hotel. Tryouts for the various parts will be held the first week in February.

Dr. Kindler Patron Of Seagle Concert

Symphony Conductor Close Friend of Artist.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, is among patrons for the concert to be given Thursday evening at the King-Smith Playhouse by John Seagle. Dr. Kindler is a close friend of Mr. Seagle and also of his father, Oscar Seagle, eminent concert barytone, who for some years was associated with Jean de Reske, for whom Mr. Seagle is named.

Other patrons for the concert include Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Sam D. McReynolds, wife of Representative McReynolds, of Texas.

Also Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Miss Laura Harlan, Mrs. Arthur Tirrell and Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Groover, Mrs. Celestine A. Adams, Dr. and Mrs. Roul d'Eca, Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson and Mrs. Charles W. Kutz.

The fashion show is sponsored by Mrs. Abbott MacGinnis.

Ohioans in D. C. Paying Honor to McKinley Today

Senator Bulkley and Representative Jenkins to Speak at Program.

The Ohio Society of Washington tonight will hold its twenty-eighth McKinley birthday meeting, honoring the memory of Ohio's martyred President, William McKinley. The Raleigh Hotel ballroom will be the scene of the party, which will include a program, supper and dancing.

Senator Robert J. Bulkley, senior Senator from Ohio, who is president of the society, will preside and will introduce the speaker. Representative Thomas A. Jenkins, a vice president of the society, will talk on "The Life of William McKinley." Musical selections on the program will be given by Charles Wilfred Smith, Welsh-American tenor.

When the Ohio Society was organized in Washington in 1910 it was written into the charter that the principal meeting of the year should be held on January 29, birth date of McKinley, and for many years the January meeting of the Buckeye State Society has been the largest of the season. This year, the meeting was postponed so as not to conflict with the President's Birthday balls on Saturday.

Throughout the 28 years of its existence in the Capital, the Ohio Society has been headed by notable men. Its first president was William R. Day, then a justice of the Supreme Court. The second president, who served for many years, was William Howard Taft, who later served both as president and Chief Justice. Other presidents have included: Senators Theodore E. Burton and Simeon D. Fess, and Renick C. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

In addition to Senator Bulkley and Representative Jenkins, present officers of the society are: Ernest H. Van Fossan, chairman of the governing committee; A. R. Williams, secretary; Miss S. Irene Neikirk, treasurer; Mrs. W. B. Putnam and E. A. Drake, vice presidents; James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, chaplain; Martin Leatherman, historian. Members of the governing committee include Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior; H. W. Kitzmiller, Harry L. Gilchrist, I. M. Foster and Mrs. Thad H. Brown.

Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najero, the Ambassador of Mexico, and Senora de Castillo Najero will be honor guests at the next meeting of the Texas State Society, which will be held at the Washington Hotel on Saturday evening at 9 o'clock. Members of the staff of the Mexican Embassy will also be present. Representative Richard M. Kleberg, of Corpus Christi, Tex., will introduce the honor guests.

An added feature of the meeting will be a message from Pat N. Neff, former Governor of Texas and now president of Baylor University. This message will be delivered in person by Mr. Neff from his home in Waco by long-distance telephone, in commemoration of the ninety-eighth anniversary of the founding of Baylor, the oldest educational institution in Texas.

Benefit Tea Arranged By Junior Women's Club

The Junior Women's Club will hold a Valentine silver tea Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. Dean Shure, 8 Pine avenue, Takoma Park, Md. Proceeds will go to the Free Lunch Fund of the Takoma elemtary school.

Mrs. Ralph G. Shure, daughter-in-law of Mrs. R. Dean Shure, is chairman of the committee.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE INFLUX of Broadway and Hollywood talent which has been shedding a glamorous aura over Washington parties of late was augmented last evening by the appearance of two stars from the Metropolitan Opera. They were Nino Martini and Mme. Vina Bovy, for whom the Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich entertained at dinner followed by a musicale.

As a hundred or so guests found their way to little gold chairs to hear the concert at the embassy, there was much polite craning of necks to discover in the audience two others who had been present at the dinner, blonde, Austrian-born Elissa Landi and Elsa Merlini, Italian actress. Miss Landi turned out to be, not a blonde, as she looks in the movies, but a pretty Titian-haired lady who last night wore a black velvet dress with a complicated neckline, diamond clips at the shoulders, and a diamond choker necklace. Miss Merlini was in an olive green frock with a halter neck. She is over here from Italy for a rest between plays.

DUDLEY HARMON.

* * * *

Mme. Bovy, who is a Belgian, looks somewhat like Donna Matilde from a distance, and as both were dressed in white last night it was a bit confusing. Both Mme. Bovy and Mr. Martini—and what a contrast they made, she so blonde and he very dark—sang several encores, a number of duets, as well as solos.

The home-town ladies certainly faced competition last evening as besides the singers and actresses there were a number of well-known New Yorkers down for the occasion. One of these was dark, pretty Mrs. Mario Panza, the former Jane Sanford, who with her husband is visiting Prince del Drago, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy. He was best man at their wedding a year ago in Palm Beach, where the Panzas are now bound.

Mrs. Carroll Carstairs, who with her husband is also visiting Prince del Drago, was present last night. The former Burks Yuille, she is very good looking with dark eyes and a long bob.

* * * *

Among the many guests last evening were a number of people, or wives of people, prominent in official life. Among these were Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Oregon Senator—she wore a gown of ice blue satin; Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador; Mme. Espil in a white crepe gown embroidered in gold; Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, the Sol Blooms and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

One of the loveliest gowns seen last night was that worn by Mrs. S. Kent Legare, of gray tulle, bouffant style, with a jacket of sequins. Gray tulle was also chosen by Miss Rebecca Wellington. Another notably well-dressed woman, Mrs. Albert Dewey, was in red lace with a low decolletage.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen, Frau Dieckhoff, the Ambassador's wife; Mrs. C. Mathews Dick in a black chiffon gown with a long flowing pink cape; Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce, George T. Summerlin, Nora de With, Mrs. Emory Sands and Robert Coe were only a few of many others present at what was a very festive party.

* * * *

The Earl and Countess of Rosse are arriving next week-end to visit Robert Coe for a few days. Mr. Coe, who is with the State Department, was at Oxford with the earl, who happens to be the nephew of Lady Lister-Kaye, well known here. The titled English folk are now in New York.

D. C. Man Usher At N. Y. Wedding

Huntington Thom of Washington, will usher at the wedding of Miss Dorothy Douglas Robinson, a grandniece of the late President Theodore Roosevelt and a cousin of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to Randolph Appleton Kidder, of Beverly Farms, Mass. The ceremony will take place next Saturday afternoon at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York.

Miss Robinson is the daughter of Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Chadwick and Monroe Douglas Robinson. She will have as her attendants Mrs. Kenneth S. Walker, Mrs. Clinton Wyckoff, Mrs. Alfred Kidder, and the Misses Elise Duggan, Rosalind Everdell, Martha Frick, Edith Derby, Faith Kidder, Susan Mary Jay, Leslie Hadden and Sheila Redmond.

Alfred Kidder will be his brother's best man, and, besides Mr. Thom, the ushers will be James Kidder, Robert B. Cutler, Francis H. Burr, Charles F. Woodward and E. Francis Bowditch, William W. Prout; Stewart Alsop and John Alsop cousins of the bride; Charles Wiggin, Robert Grinnell and Thomas Whitney.

Luncheon Set Tomorrow.

The luncheon meeting of Phyllis Lyman Colony, National Society of New England Women, will be held at Tilden Gardens tomorrow at 12:30. Mrs. George McCann will preside. The hostesses will include Mrs. Alice L. Bennett, Mrs. Olivia Ryckman, Mrs. John Sperle, Mrs. Jesse Lutton and Miss Nina Orner. Mrs. George L. Palmer attended the meeting of the national society, in New York, in observance of the forty-third anniversary of organization day.

W. C. T. U. to Meet.

Dr. Izora Scott, national legislative director for the Women's Christian Temperance Union, will discuss this phase of its work at the meeting of Central Iota Union tomorrow night at 100 Maryland avenue northwest. The program also will include highlights from the life of Lillian M. N. Stevens.

Petras Rimsa's Work Exhibited By Waggamans

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Waggaman entertained at tea Saturday afternoon in honor of the foremost sculptor of Lithuania, Petras Rimsa, who is on a tour of this country exhibiting his works. Subsequent to his showing in Baltimore, Mr. Rimsa came to Washington armed with his finest pieces which were exhibited in the drawing room of the lovely Waggaman home on R street. Wearing a hostess gown of red crepe and a beautiful necklace of star sapphires, Mrs. Waggaman received her guests, presenting each with an illustrated booklet on Petras Rimsa and his art.

Among the guests were the Lithuanian Minister and Mme. Zadeikis, who came to greet their countryman, the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Boncesco, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sutherland, Mrs. Sutherland Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Mrs. Lauren Johnson, Mrs. R. F. Mackenzie, mother of Mrs. Waggaman, and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann who assisted in serving tea.

Others were Commander and Mrs. Charles Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Burnside, Commander and Mrs. Walter Davidson, Mrs. William C. Gwynn, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Duckett, Miss Rose Greely and Wolcott Waggaman.

Works that won the most admiration were "The Ploughman"—Rimsa's forceful masterpiece of stark realism, and "The Lithuanian School" which reveals both in subject matter and treatment the elements of Lithuanian culture. In striking contrast was the "Satyr and The Owl"—a work of pure symbolism richly carved in exquisite detailed ornamentation.

Bob Waggaman, who himself owns an interesting collection of curios and small "objets d'art," received with his parents a number of his friends, including Miss Dolly Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. John Reyburn, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Parker, Stanley Crandall, Ridge Hall, and Henry Rowland who accompanied his mother, Mrs. Henry C. Rowland.

Lady Lister Kaye Concert Hostess

Lady Lister Kaye, of London, who is making her annual winter sojourn at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, will entertain a large party at the Bagby Foundation concert this afternoon.

Her guests in the two boxes which she has reserved will include the Duchess of Richelieu, Princess Wolkonski, the Earl and Countess of Rosse, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Chandler, Mrs. Newbold Morris, Mrs. de Wolf Clark, Mrs. Hollister Sturges, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mrs. Lawrence Keene, Mrs. Scoville Treadwell, Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, William White, Wade Chance, Francklyn Wynne Paris.

Lady Lister Kaye, who usually visits Washington each season, is expected to come here later in the winter.

Mrs. Howard to Talk On Events Tomorrow

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will give her weekly lecture on current events at the Sulgrave Club tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

The President's message on national defense, the Van Zeeland recovery plan, an Albanian romance and the Far Eastern crisis will be topics.

John Roosevelt And Anne Clark To Wed June 18

Boston Debutante to Become Bride of President's Youngest Son.

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, blonde debutante, of Boston and Nahant, will be married June 18.

The mother of the bride-to-be, Mrs. F. Haven Clark, made public the wedding plans yesterday, disclosing the ceremony would be at the Nahant Protestant Episcopal Church at noon. The Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, and the Rev. Endicott Peabody, Groton School headmaster, will officiate.

Mr. Peabody read the vows at the weddings of John's brothers and of Miss Clark's parents.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will come from Washington in a special train to attend the ceremonies, to which 300 have been invited.

Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, the President's mother, and John's brothers, James, Elliott and Franklin D., jr., also will attend.

Franklin will be John's best man, reversing the positions the brothers had last June when Franklin became the husband of Ethel duPont.

James and Elliott will be two of the ushers.

Miss Sally P. Clark, a younger sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor.

Another younger sister, Miss Joan W. Clark, will be a flower girl, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, the former Betsy Cushing, of Boston, and Mrs. John Boettiger, of Seattle, John's sister, will be two of the bridesmaids.

The bride will be given in marriage by her grand uncle, Francis R. Bangs, of Marlboro.

The wedding will come before the Harvard commencement, as the couple plan to travel for six weeks. John will receive his diploma by mail.

When they return, the young couple will visit the White House and Mrs. Clark at Nahant, and then will take an apartment in suburban Brookline. John expects to work in a Boston advertising office.

Wankowicz's Daughter Will Be Wed Today

Marriage to Take Place in Cathedral of Oliva Near Danzig.

According to announcements sent out by the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, the wedding of their daughter, Miss Irene Wankowicz, to Stanislaw Popiel will take place today in Poland.

The couple originally had hoped to be married on board a ship, where they first met, but this could not be worked out, and the ceremony will take place in the Cathedral of Oliva, near Danzig.

For their honeymoon the couple will go to Mr. Popiel's country place in Poland. Mme. Wankowicz, mother of the bride, is in Oliva for the wedding.

Miss Wankowicz studied at the University of Warsaw for a year and when she came to this country entered Vassar College. Later she attended Rosemont College in Philadelphia.

Mr. Popiel is in the shipping department of the Ministry of Industry and Commerce. He studied law at Louvain, Belgium, and economics at St. Gallen, Switzerland.

U. D. C. Chapter to Stage Reception, Dance Feb. 7

Plans are under way for the reception and dance to be given in honor of the newly elected officers of Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue, northwest, February 7, from 9 to 12. Miss Liza Ellen Carpenter is the new president.

Mrs. Robert B. Whitehurst, chairman of entertainment, is making arrangements for the reception, assisted by the following members of her committee: Mrs. Gabriel Edmonston, Miss Laura Embrey, Miss Virginia Grayson, Mrs. May Hadenfelt, Miss Asalia Lunsford, Mrs. Oscar McWhorter, Miss Katherine Wootten, Miss Eliabeth Ratrie, Mrs. Gladys Marthill, Mrs. Clarence Engel.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man's Artistic Ambition Puts End to Romance That Began With 'Love at First Sight;' What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20 and as far as I can remember, I have always been popular with both sexes. I have received four proposals of marriage, but didn't accept because I wasn't in love with the men. But about a year ago I met a young man and fell in love with him at first sight. I think it was the same with him. We were together constantly for several months. Then one night he said we couldn't go on like that, for two reasons—because he couldn't give me the things he would like to, and because he couldn't spare the time from his work. He is seriously interested in one of the arts, and devoting as much of his time as possible to advancing himself in it.

• • • •

We parted. Two months passed. Then I was taken ill and mother was sent for. (You see, I work here, but my home is out of town). Wanting him to meet her, I telephoned and invited him over. He accepted instantly and came right over. They took a great liking to each other. Now, a party has been planned by a member of the family with which I live. He has been invited, and again he accepted promptly. During the course of the conversation, he asked about me, and repeatedly mentioned the fact that he would like to see me. She invited him over. He came, and seemed greatly changed. He seems much older in looks and mind. He was more quiet. His eyes never left me, but I treated him indifferently.

• • • •

Yet I would give anything in the world to have him back on the old basis. I still love him and as time goes on I miss him more. I can't stand it much longer. You see, we had talked of marriage and children and a home. I can't understand it and I can't bear it. How do you analyze the situation? What should I do? How can I win him back? I cannot go on like this. Sincerely,

WORRIED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR WORRIED: From what you say, it seems logical to suppose the young man has, with inflexible determination and fixed purpose, mapped out a course of action leading to professional recognition which allows no room in his life, just now, for serious romance or marriage. Perhaps he was being, according to his lights, and to the best of his ability, entirely honest and straightforward in defining his two reasons for breaking off the relationship which seemed to begin with "love at first sight." Perhaps, in the beginning, you swept him off his feet, as we say, and he just drifted with the tide of his first serious romantic attachment, until he found it was threatening the very foundation stones of his future as he had planned it—and so decided to break it off, at whatever cost to his feelings.

• • • •

This would explain his staying away, as well as his coming so promptly to meet your mother when summoned; and also his gravity and concern for you when he found you ill. If he seemed "more quiet," it may have been because he felt he had no consolation or encouragement to offer you, of a lover's kind, and hence must hold his peace.

• • • •

However, since he has stated his position so honestly and unequivocally, it seems to me you have no choice but to adapt yourself to his decision. It would not be fair for you to attempt to finesse him into revising his plan of life merely to spare yourself heartbreak. That is looking at the problem too selfishly. Even if you got your way, by guile and enticement, you probably wouldn't find happiness for yourself, nor could you give it to him.

• • • •

Although you have had four proposals of marriage, remember you are very young yet, barely on the threshold of adult existence, and that this is your first experience with mature emotion. You can well afford to chalk this heartache up to experience. It gives you a standard of comparison to go by in your future relationships with men, and may make you far more gentle and understanding in all your social dealings. I wonder how much thought you gave to the heartache you must have visited on those four youngsters who proposed marriage to you in the past, and who were rejected. After all, they had to go on living, even though denied the girl of their heart's desire. You may remember the slang phrase of a few years ago, "He can dish it out, but he can't take it." You have dished out sharp disappointment to men in the past, and now you are whining that you can't take it, when it becomes your portion to swallow. You would be proving yourself a rather inferior specimen of humanity if you refused to stand up to this blow and failed to winnow from it certain profits that can be turned to good account in your life.

• • • •

If this man is meant for you, and you for him, your paths will converge at some future day, without undue striving on your part. In the meantime, the sanest, most intelligent, most self-preservative thing you can do is to give yourself over, gallantly and resourcefully, to a compensatory variety of social experiences and cultural pursuits, so that the advancing years won't find you a wan, peevish, embittered, frustrated, thoroughly unattractive person, lacking the vitality, warmth, humor, understanding and charm which comes of meeting problems and disappointments with grace.

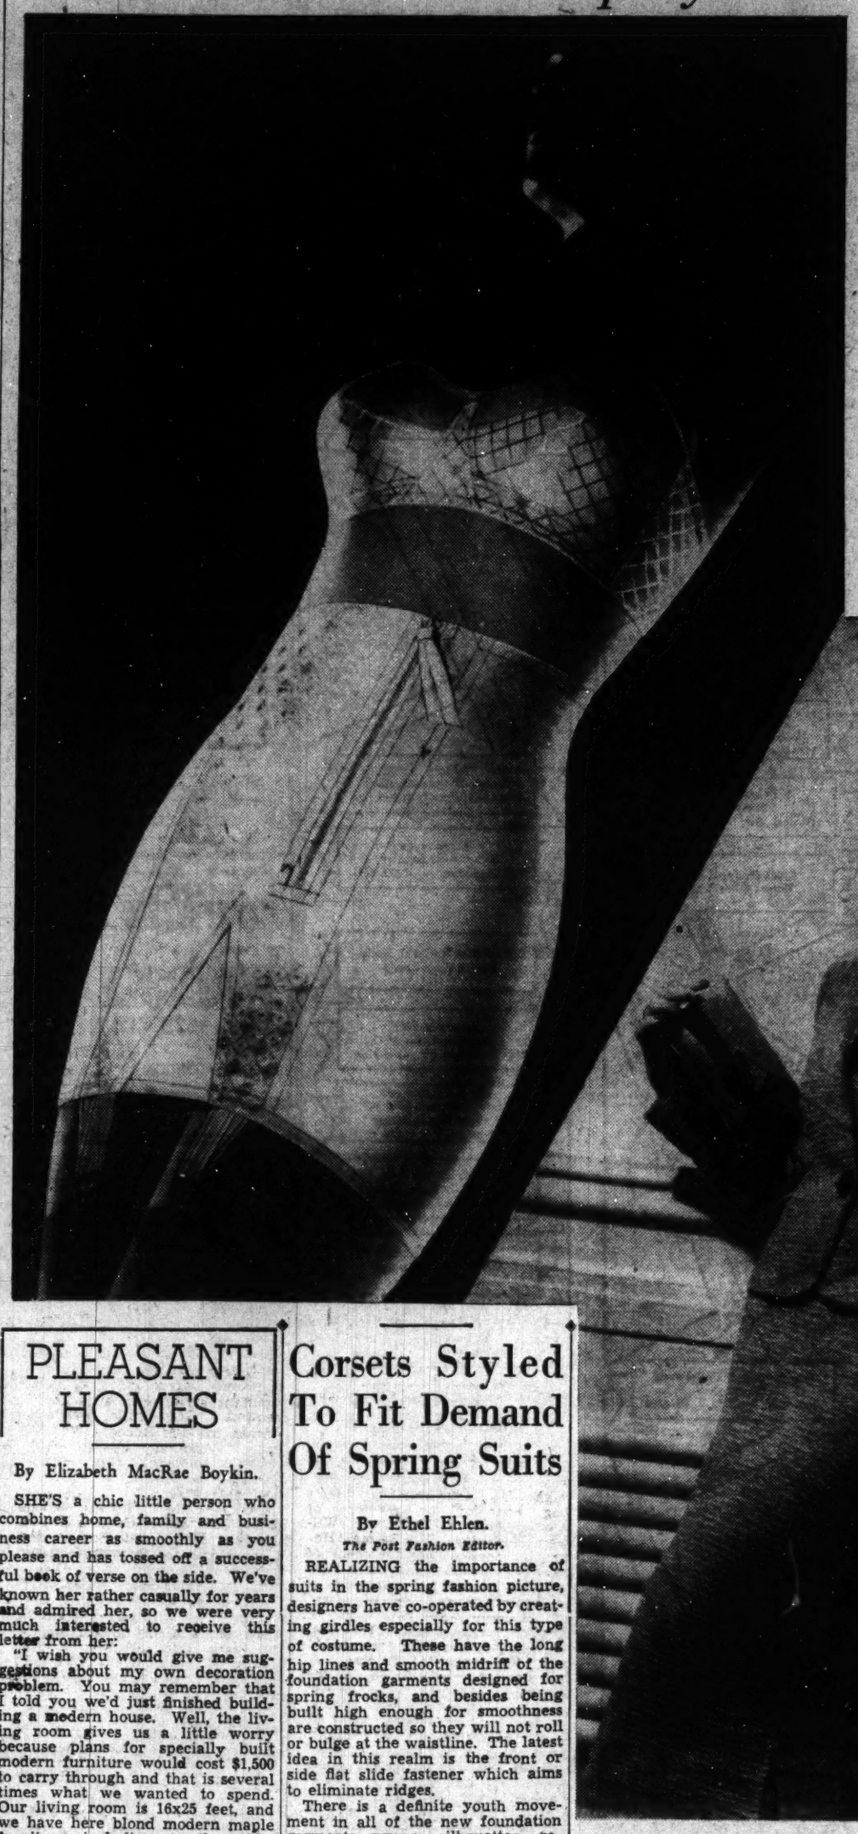
New Girdle to Accompany Tailored Suit



THE Le Gant girdle featuring the new flat-closing front is of brocaded lastex with two-way stretch back and front to give the popular flat silhouette. Note high build for midriff smoothness and the long slim hipline. The uplift bra is of brocaded lastex—as comfortable as it is efficient. Neyret of Paris designed the soft tailored suit of black, red and gray wool jersey; jacket features longer lines, rounded corners and the smart one-button closing.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S a chic little person who combines home, family and business career as smoothly as you please and has tossed off a successful book of verse on the side. We've known her rather casually for years and admired her, so we were very much interested to receive this letter from her:

"I wish you would give me suggestions about my own decoration problem. You may remember that I told you we'd just finished building a modern house. Well, the living room gives us a little worry because plans for specially built modern furniture would cost $1,500 to carry through and that is several times what we wanted to spend. Our living room is 16x25 feet, and we have here blond modern maple furniture including trestle table, book shelves, sofa and occasional table. Our windows face an extraordinary view that looks for all the world like a Peter Breughel painting and we don't like to neglect it, though on the opposite wall is a very cheering fireplace. I enclose a sketch. Will you suggest an arrangement of furniture? And what colors for the walls, keeping in mind the fact that the room is virtually all windows. We will have two or three interesting abstract paintings. But we haven't done anything about rugs, colors, etc. (with the exception of draperies in natural cotton tufted in white). Have you any nice inexpensive suggestions to make?"

We're wondering if something rather exciting couldn't ge done in monotones in soft dull blue since there is so much light here—a grey-green-blue, the walls a very pale version, the carpet and upholstery deeper with maybe a chair or two in a dusty coral for contrast. Or go all beige and see how perfectly grand that idea would be to use bold coloring on the walls—emerald green maybe. Then naturals to browns in tweedy textures for the other things in the room and a striped fabric for one chair for contrast. Why not have a pair of easy chairs flanking the fireplace, then a big deep sofa at right angles to the best windows—then it would include a vista of view as well as fireplace.

Corsets Styled To Fit Demand Of Spring Suits

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

REALIZING the importance of suits in the spring fashion picture, designers have co-operated by creating girdles especially for this type of costume. These have the long hip lines and smooth midriff of the foundation garments designed for spring frocks, and besides being built high enough for smoothness are constructed so they will not roll or bulge at the waistline. The latest idea in this realm is the front or side flat slide fastener which aims to eliminate ridges.

There is a definite youth movement in all of the new foundation garments—young silhouettes regardless of age, or type of natural figures. With the right choice of garments fitted to your figure, stylists claim this can be accomplished easily and satisfactorily. What is this accepted new silhouette? It stresses an uplifted bustline (not exaggerated), which in turn lengthens the waistline; a long torso and hip line; and in most cases the garments are longer than they have been the past several seasons.

Materials for spring foundations and girdles are very light in weight and either equipped with very light boning or without benefit of boning at all. It is all in the construction, which gives a maximum of comfort and figure control with a minimum of weight. Elastic lace is much in evidence for girdles and foundations, but is not suggested for the person with a figure inclined to plumpness, a firmer fabric being advisable.

Hips will be missing this spring and summer, if predictions materialize. According to previews of the oncoming seasons, there is a definite trend toward flatness where hiplines are concerned. Many of the brassieres to accompany girdles are made of brocaded or plain lastex, which clings to the figure, uplifts and is as comfortable as it is efficient. Other bras fashioned of satin lace, brocade, or combinations of these materials, follow the uplifted fitted theme. In the case of plump midriff, it is advisable to choose a bra with long lines, which comes down over the top of the high-built girdle.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Use of Animal Products.

We have many different methods of treating disease nowadays. They include surgery, diet, water treatment, heat, electrical treatment, X-ray and radium, antitoxins and serums, but drugs which were among the first substances to be used, still hold their place. Certainly no physician would like to practice medicine without the use of drugs. This includes surgeons, eye specialists and all other specialists.

We have many classifications and sources of drugs. In former times they depended entirely upon substances which are found in nature, such as plants, minerals and animal substances. But with the dawn of modern chemistry, pharmacists and physicians have not waited to find a favorable substance in nature, but have deliberately gone out to try to manufacture it.

Our uses of animal products are far wider and more scientific than they were in ancient times when such things as the mythical unicorn's horn, elephant's tusks, toad venom, etc., were used. Nowadays we use such animal substances as products of the ductless glands, which give us drugs like adrenalin and pituitrin, which are widely used in all kinds of conditions.

When we think of natural drugs, we think particularly of vegetables and minerals. In the old Egyptian manuscripts are found references to many of the substances which we still use— for instance, castor oil and opium. The Roman physician, Galen, made a very complete study of vegetable drugs, and they are often called "Galenicals". When the medieval physician, Paracelsus, came into vogue, he introduced mineral remedies, and had to fight very hard to convince physicians of his day that they were equal to the old vegetable drugs.

For effective vegetable drugs we still have to depend upon transportation, because it is not possible to grow all useful drugs in a temperate climate. The best digitalis leaves are said to come from England, although they grow well in Minnesota. The poppy, which produces opium, is still cultivated only in Turkey, Macedonia, Persia, India and China. Quinine and ipecac come from South America, and the new drug so useful in treatment of nose infection and asthma, ephedrine, is grown in China.

New Heel Style.

A recent style that is gradually working its way into the vanguard of footwear favorites is the heel that looks like an inverted obelisk—the perfect complement to the straight-backed shoe which succeeds in making a size 7 look like a size 5. This type of heel appears on many styles, from the dainty sandal to the robust walking shoe. It looks equally effective when covered to match the shoe or in the comfortable built-up heel made of individual little lifts that keep smart, smooth and shiny long after the rest of the shoe begins to wear.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Goal of Reducing Ought to Be Weight to Match Build.

By Ida Jean Kain.

As usual, there seems to be a division of masculine and feminine opinion as to what constitutes feminine pulchritude. In the seven years I have been trying to reduce the country's overweight hazard, most of my correspondence has been with women who despaired of getting their weight down and with men who despaired of women getting their weight down.

Some, of the latter write to the tone of will I please not "encourage the women in their folly," and others more belligerently demand who do I think I am, and whatever gave me the idea that men want women thin, anyway!

Men like women who don't go to extremes.

Curves Return to Vogue.

Since curves have come in vogue these letters have practically ceased, which should prove something—maybe that they like curves! But the other day along came a letter from an artist who says that my articles are rather amusing to one who admires the work of the great figure painters and sculptors—the old masters. He says that if I had ever visited the Metropolitan Museum I would be unable to find among classic Greek statuary such examples of the female figure as we now see on our streets by the thousands. Well, the last time I was at the museum I was almost thrown out for trying to measure Venus' leg; but evidently we go on different streets, for I see an increasing percentage of women whose figures conform to the classic ideals.

I can understand the righteous indignation of this artist when he sees women who have starved themselves for fashion. Certainly ultra thinness is far from beautiful, but when he says that "only one woman in a thousand has a symmetrically developed figure," it sounds a little far-fetched. Today's figure is definitely feminine and the proportions match the ideals decreed by the old masters, and upheld by the laws of health.

Normal Weight Best Goal.

According to the present-day conception of beauty, no woman is attractive if she is thinner than her structure warrants. And if anyone thinks I am in favor of subnormal weight, I have been misunderstood. As I have said repeatedly, the stocky girl and the Junoesquire type may be 10 per cent above normal weight and look their best. Up to 30, I favor plumpness, but after 30 statistics indicate that optimal health goes with weight slightly below the averages on the weight charts. The reducer's goal should be normal weight with curves according to structure. This does not, however, allow for an increase in poundage with every birthday.

Men apparently do not like extremes in anything—fingernails, fashions, or weight. While they dislike the string bean figure, they are just as much opposed to overweight. I do hear from men who want me he help their wives to reduce sensibly—but surely.

The GENTLER SEX

By Melvina Lindsay.

Speaker of the Day.

"Ladies, I hate to interrupt you in the midst of this marvelous salad, but we have such a full program, such a wealth of good things, as it were, that I think we had better get underway. That will give us all the spare time to hear our speaker of the day, Prof. Horatio Minch, who has traveled 800 miles to be with us today. Now, while the dishes are being removed, Miss Joyce De Tralto will favor us with a group of songs of her own composition.

• • • •

"Thank you Miss De Tralto—especially for the encores . . . yes, Mrs. Posey . . . Ladies, Mrs. Posey suggests that we give a rising vote of thanks to Miss De Tralto and her accompanist, Mrs. Mae Featherton St. Clair Ripple. Shall we rise? . . . Now then, while you are finishing your ice cream, Mrs. Joyner, chairman of our house committee, will make a few announcements.

• • • •

"Thank you, Mrs. Joyner. Now is everything clear to everybody? . . . What, Mrs. McAddle? . . . Mrs. Gink? . . . Wait, wait, ladies! I think you had better see Mrs. Joyner or myself after the luncheon. Now, we have with us today—what? . . . Oh yes, Dr. Hopper . . . Ladies, Dr. Nannie B. Hopper, who is sponsoring our movement for saner spring hats, has a few announcements to make.

• • • •

"Thank you, Dr. Hopper. Now I want to introduce to you—Yes, Mrs. Smiley? . . . Ladies, Mrs. Smiley proposes a rising vote of thanks to the arrangements committee for this beautiful luncheon and especially to Mrs. Estelle Doodle, who made the favors. Shall we rise? . . . Now then, ladies, we are extremely fortunate in having with us today Mrs. Luella Lightcap, chairman of our extension work, who will report on her activities in the resettlement areas.

• • • •

"Thank you, Mrs. Lightcap. Now ladies, I know you are eager to hear Prof. Minch, but there is just one little matter of business first. Mrs. Close, our club treasurer, reports there are still many members whose dues are in arrears. Now ladies, we simply cannot run a club without money. If you have not paid your dues, PLEASE see Mrs. Close at the end of this meeting.

"The next number on our program will be an inspirational message from our president emeritus, Mrs. J. Chauncey Bigger.

"Thank you, Mrs. Bigger. Now ladies, we have so many good things ahead of us, so to speak, that we are going to omit the flag salute. But I do want at this point to introduce a few of our distinguished guests. We have with us today a representative of our local Capitalists's Protective Association, Mr. Fellowes Muchmore. Mr. Muchmore, will you please stand? . . . Thank you, Mr. Muchmore. We have also with us a representative of the Civic Proletarian Committee, Mr. Elmer Blinker. Mr. Blinker, will you stand? . . . Thank you, Mr. Blinker.

"I also want to introduce Mrs. Noodle's sister-in-law, Mrs. Erasmus Noodle, who is visiting her from Honolulu, and Mrs. Posey's mother, who has just celebrated her golden wedding anniversary. We also are happy to have with us today the Rev. Dr. Timothy Banal who has been the pastor of our beloved president emeritus for 42 years and who will give us a little message, Dr. Banal.

"Thank you, Dr. Banal. Ladies! Ladies! Please don't any of you leave yet; we shall hear Prof. Minch in just a few minutes. Now when I wrote Prof. Minch last summer I told him he was to be the only speaker at our luncheon. But this morning I learned that a very distinguished visitor. Mr. Phineas Squibb, who attended the wedding of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, was in town and I have prevailed on him to say a few words to us. Mr. Squibb.

"Thank you, Mr. Squibb. Ladies! Please don't go yet! We will be only a few minutes longer . . . Yes, Mrs. Posey? . . . Ladies, Mrs. Posey proposes a rising vote of thanks to Mr. Squibb. Shall we rise? . . . Now then, it is my great pleasure to introduce to you——yes, Dr. Hopper? . . . Ladies, Dr. Hopper says, will the captains in the saner spring hats drive, please meet her in the Byzantine room immediately after this meeting—No, ladies! Not now! Later* Please, ladies, the luncheon is not over. We have not yet had Prof. Minch.

"Now then, ladies, it is my very great pleasure to introduce to you our speaker of the day Prof. Horatio Minch, who in the few remaining minutes, will address us on "How to Solve the Economic Depression and Insure World Peace."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 30.

ALTHOUGH the event is nearly two weeks back in my diary, if I kept one, this is the first chance I've had to write a piece about my most recent escape from this great foreign capital to the United States proper. But since this particular trek into our beloved country was unusually exciting and happy, it howls for some description.

On this one, I ALICE HUGHES. didn't go it alone, but in the company of a half dozen other comic artists and writers, the feminine contingent consisting of myself and my peppery and clever little pal, Ida Jean Kain, who experts on the acquisition and care of the feminine form divine, to be optimistic. Waving a fond ta-ta to the icy Hudson, we darted west on the haughty Century and headed for Minneapolis, where we were to display ourselves and wares under the auspices of the Tribune of that place. Our baggage was crammed with ski-suits, woolies, snowshoes and velvet ear-muffs. For we had visions of being froze for the winter in that Northern fasthess.

Imagine our astonishment, after leaving zero weather in this sissified city, to find the streets of the Minnesota metropolis nice and slushy. Quickly trading our snow-shoes for rubbers, we started a frantic series of personal appearances. My little old man, on his best behavior, was along to instigate ovations and carry the typewriter.

• • • •

Compared with Ida Jean Kain and the artists, I had a restful time. My toughest day had only seven appearances—two stores, two radio orations, luncheons at the Zonta and Advertising Clubs, and an appearance before 11,000 ardent people at the auditorium—an awful spot for a midget reporter. I was petrified. So I just gave them a quick flash of ye old silver evening dress, muttered into a microphone for two minutes, and ran for my life.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT ANOTHER TOWN—Social observation. On the crack trains of the East the dining car steward turns on his property smile and says "Are you enjoying your luncheon?" On the streamliner Hiawatha, Chicago to Minneapolis, the same functionary, with a friendly grin, asks, "How are you getting along?" Take your pick—I've made mine! . . . On the latter trainer I met a wonderful fat, old baby having his bottle in the diner. His lovely mother said "Oh, he's a regular Viking—and the Minnesota fullback in '58!"

• • • •

The morning greeting of the hello girl at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, delighted me. "Good morning—7:30—and the temperature is 30 above!" Of course, if she had said "20 below," I shouldn't be out of the sheets yet!

• • • •

I was flattered and tickled, pardonably I hope, at seeing myself in a window of one of the big stores. This shop had on display the mannequin for which I posed for Cora Scovil. If I could look as goregous as that flattering dummy, I'd open a glamor school. The same store saw me slightly rocked backward. I'm included in my traveling wardrobe the very hotstest, totsiest and newest style touch here—a white balloon blouse. I was greeted at the big store by a stylist wearing the identical article—which only proves that fashion is now simultaneous from Portland to Portland and all way points.

Perhaps there should be tunnels connecting the White House with other Government buildings . . . When nervous gentlefolk see Tommy Corcoran emerging from the main or residential part of Executive Mansion early in the morning, before the President has arrived at his office in the west wing, they tend to get more nervous. (Or maybe Tommy should wear a disguise.)

CORCORAN.

One of the Capital's great ladies, a sort of American Margot Asquith or Lady Astor (but on the liberal side), is Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, the vivid wife of Pennsylvania's former governor. Her salon is a veritable mulligan stew of assorted political beliefs; liberal lambs and extremist wolves side by side.

Mrs. Pinchot, who has kept her hair a becoming reddish tint for years, points to her red-haired son as proof that children can inherit the acquired characteristics of their parents. (Any son would be lucky to inherit Mrs. Pinchot's, innate or acquired.)

"—the Capital is rough on stars"

Movie stars from Hollywood who come to the Capital for a whirl of publicity in the Nation's No. 1 limelight usually leave Washington with mingled emotions . . .

They get the whirl, all right, but it leaves them panting and exhausted; for the gilded city on the Potomac is geared up to do more whirling in a day than movie stars usually do in a month.

* * * *

What's worse, instead of being deified by an open-mouthed populace, the stars must run the gantlet here of a line-up of diplomats, pundits, officials and statesmen to whom a movie star (male or female) is something cute, but not world-shaking . . . Washington takes its celebrities indulgently, up to and including queens and dukes . . . A mere $5,000 a week movie star is apt to go West with a bit of an inferiority complex.

Potshots at Hotshots: Connoisseurs of Senate oratory are a little disappointed at Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, who is smart enough to have modeled his vaudeville act of the filibuster against the anti-lynching Trojan horse after Borah . . . Instead, his outburst (a county fair epic), must rank a shade below Ellender's and only a shade above Bilbo's . . .

At the President's Birthday Ball I fell to chatting with a philosophical statesman from New England.

"Have you noticed how many great men," he said, apropos of the drive to help crippled children, "were frail or ailing as children?"

He rattled off Nietzche, Mozart, Cecil Rhodes, Talleyrand, Lord Macauley and a dozen others.

"Even Teddy Roosevelt," he said, "was rather pale and delicate, as a youngster."

House to Act In D. C. Relief Crisis Today

Refusal of More Funds to Throw the Issue Into Senate.

Women Voters' Report Due on 500 Cases of Want.

(Third of a series of articles.)

By Edward T. Folliard.

Relief has become an obnoxious word to many Americans, a synonym for abuse and chiseling. Not in Washington, since it has no vote, but elsewhere, charges have been made that relief was used for political bribery. Consequently, it sometimes is hard to arouse interest in a "relief problem," no matter how critical it may be.

If some impartial group were to tackle the problem, some nonprofessional group whose only thought was to get at the truth, then the skeptical and the disillusioned probably would be more willing to listen.

Fortunately for the District of Columbia, such a group has made a study of the situation here and its report will be made public today. Under the direction of Mrs. David Cushman Doyle, 23 members of the League of Women Voters went forth two months ago to get the facts about local relief. As Mrs. Coyle told a House appropriations sub-committee, they "did not take anybody's word for it."

500 Jobless Interviewed.

The women interviewed 500 persons, many of them in their homes. These were not persons on relief but persons who had been denied relief. It is for that reason that the report on them ought to be significant. Thereis plenty of data with respect to individuals and families receiving relief funds.

But the 500 who were interviewed by the clubwomen were "employables," persons able to work but unable to find jobs. For them no relief funds are available. They are the ones who have overwhelmed churches and private agencies, crying for milk for their children and asking for rent money to put off eviction.

It is largely because of these jobless "employables" that the Council of Social Agencies has called on Congress to boost the emergency relief fund of $900,000 to $2,900,000.

Too Little for Aid Now.

As matters stand, the council says, there is not even enough money for the "unemployables"—the sick and the crippled—much less the unemployed "employables."

Mrs. Coyle promised the House sub-committee handling the 1939 District appropriation bill that she would show that there are "people in the District who actually are starving."

The District bill will come up in the House today and a lively debate on the relief section is anticipated. Actually it began Friday when Representative Jerry Voorhees (Democrat), of California, charged that hundreds of destitute were being denied relief here for lack of funds. Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, who is in charge of the bill, told him that the relief appropriation for 1939 would be the same as for 1938 if social security grants were included, a statement which members of the Board of Public Welfare promptly insisted did not give a true picture of the situation.

Churches Fear Starvation.

That a serious situation exists here would appear to be indisputable. The Federation of Churches said last week that it was bordering on "mass starvation" and Father Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities, agreed that private agencies could not possibly take care of all the jobless "employables" turned down for relief.

Hope that the House will increase the relief appropriation has pretty well been abandoned. Churchmen and others who are campaigning for an increase now pin their faith on the Senate, which gets the appropriation bill after it leaves the House today.

But it is not only Congress that must be converted; Washington taxpayers also must fall into line if there is to be more money for relief.

Chairman Collins made it clear at hearings on the District bill that the city already is facing a deficit in 1939.

Tax Boost Necessary.

"If we should add, say, $2,000,000 more for relief," he told welfare representatives, "it would make your budget out of balance about $5,500,000 and, frankly, I do not know where we are going to get the money."

A sub-committee of the House District Committee, headed by Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, is now working on a new tax bill for this city. Thus far it embraces a graduated business privilege tax, a continuation of the $1.75 real estate tax and a new local income tax. If more money is appropriated for relief, the tax bill will have to be fashioned accordingly.

Those who are trying to get the relief appropriation increased are supremely confident that a majority of Washington taxpayers are behind them. They don't see how the taxpayers could feel otherwise on an issue that involves hunger and cold and hopelessness. Washington, they point out, is the only city of comparable size that has failed to do something for its unemployed "employables."

415 Varnum St
Washington D.C.
Jan. 30, 1938

Dear Mr. president

I hope my birthday party to day too, Being inspired by the example set by you I too will make my own party, and since I am ten years old it is very appropriate that each of my guests contribute ten cents and send it to you as my contribution to the good cause you had advocated and at the same time wishing you a Happy Birthday

Respectfully Yours
Henry R. Grane

Post Staff Photos.

Henry R. Grane, 10, of 615 Varnum street northwest, was born on the same day as President Roosevelt. He celebrated his birthday yesterday with a party, much as did the President at the White House, but instead of receiving presents he asked his guests to contribute a dime each to the paralysis fund. Top, Henry about to cut his cake for his friends. Lower, his letter to the President.

Kennedy Visits Wife, Ill in Boston, by Air

Boston, Jan. 30 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission and new United States Ambassador to Great Britain, flew here from Washington today, visited his wife at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and then flew back to the Capital.

He said Mrs. Kennedy, recovering from an appendectomy, would leave the hospital in a week or ten days. The couple plans to sail for London on the Manhattan February 23.

Miner, 65, Is Killed In Maryland Cave-In

Lonaconing, Md., Jan. 30 (AP).—Pinned under a heavy fall of roof coal and rocks, John P. Cosgrove, 61, veteran miner, was fatally injured yesterday in the Castle Mine of the Big Vein Coal Co. His companion, Thomas McCormick, was caught by the fall but was rescued. He suffered only leg bruises.

Court Notables To Attend Fete Of Law Alumni

Georgetown Banquet Is Scheduled for Thursday Night.

A large representation of the Federal judiciary in Washington will attend the alumni dinner of the Georgetown University school of law honoring the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the school, Thursday evening at the Mayflower Hotel.

Justice Pierce Butler and Justice Owen F. Roberts, both of the United States Supreme Court, have accented invitations to attend as special guests. The District Bar Association will be represented by Bolitha J. Laws, its new president. Sponsored by the Washington Alumni Club of the law school, it was expected that more than 800 will attend to set a new record for Georgetown affairs of this kind.

A partial list of special guests announced yesterday included Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Justice Harold M. Stephens and Justice Justin Miller. From the United States District Court, the members attending are Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat and Justices Peyton Gordon, Jesse C. Adkins, Oscar R. Luhring, Joseph W. Cox, James M. Proctor and F. Dickinson Letts. Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine also has accepted.

Cold to Follow Showers Today In Capital Area

Erratic to the last, Old Man Weather yesterday made a pass at finishing off an unusual January with a balmy April day and a maximum temperature of 61 degrees.

But after a night whose lowest temperature was forecast at 50 degrees, today will be a last fling at traditional January with a rain forecast for the morning and temperatures hammered down steadily in the day. Yesterday's high temperature was reached by a 24-degree climb from a low of 38 at 4 a. m.

High winds yesterday, reaching 44 miles an hour in gusts, detracted something from an otherwise spring-like Sunday.

Yesterday's high winds were credited to a storm reported moving northeastward over Lake Michigan. Storm warnings were posted from Sandy Hook to Eastport, Me.

Thieves Get $1,000, Leave Valuables

Thieves entered the home of Attorney Peter Q. Nyce, 1700 Varnum street northwest, over the week-end and escaped with loot valued at $1,000.

Nyce, who spent the week-end out of town, told police the men took a revolver but left his valuable collection of more than 50 firearms untouched. The prowlers also took a gold ring valued at $50 but left a pair of diamond cuff links.

The robbery was one of several housebreakings reported to police over the week-end.

1 Dies, Many Hurt As 'Spring' Lures Throngs to Road

Balmy Weather Draws Throngs to Highways; Young Man and Girl Injured When Auto Hits Pole in Maryland.

One man was killed—the District's tenth traffic victim of the year—and more than a dozen persons were injured in automobile accidents in and near Washington yesterday as motorists, lured out-of-doors by the spring-like weather, thronged streets and highways.

The dead man is C. H. Humphries, colored, 60, of 1616 Manchester lane northwest. While crossing Sixteenth street near his home he was knocked down by a car operated by Sam M. Worthington, 27, of Baltimore. Humphries was dead upon arrival at Walter Reed Hospital. Worthington was held for the coroner's action.

Auto Strikes Pole.

Most seriously injured was William Summers, 26, 920 Sixth street southwest, who sustained cuts and bruises to his head and a fractured skull and ribs. He was driving a car which ran off the road and struck a telephone pole near Meadows, Md.

Ellen Scott, 26, of Benning, D. C., suffered a broken collarbone in the crash. Both were brought to Casualty Hospital for treatment.

Four persons were hurt and the driver of one machine was charged with reckless driving in a two-car collision on Fourteenth street southwest at the entrance to the Tourists' Camp.

Reckless Driving Charged.

The injured, all treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises, were Lucille Schwartz, 27, 1361 Fairmount street northwest; Robert Evans, 20, Alexandria, Va.; Mildred Barrett, 23, 1615 Eastern avenue northeast, and Charles E. Galloway, 21, Alexandria, Va.

Fourth Precinct police placed a reckless driving charge against Alfred Schwartz, 27, of the Fairmont street address. The other car was driven by Joseph R. Mettzer, 28, 607 Fourth street northwest.

Lillian Holmes, 34, 1435 E street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for brush burns to both legs and arms and possible head injuries after she fell from an automobile in Capital Heights, Md.

2 Cars in Collision.

George R. Proffitt, 29, 1715 Lincoln road northeast, was charged with reckless driving after a collision at Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue northeast. Connie Christister, 24, 5108 Third street northwest, a passenger in Proffitt's car, received a broken left leg.

Police said Proffitt was driving the wrong way on a one-way street when his car struck an automobile operated by Gray A. Talbott, colored, 32, 105 B street southeast.

Gwendolyn Ferguson, 28, 641 L street southwest, was in Providence Hospital last night with a fractured pelvis and possible fractured skull. She was brought in from an accident near Forrestville, Md.

Auto Somersaults.

Brown's machine was struck by one driven, police said, by Dr. Franklin Pedrick, 51, 1736 Columbia road northwest. Pedrick was driving north on Twentieth street while Brown's car was traveling east on S street.

Knocked Off Bicycle.

Knocked from his bicycle while riding on the Baltimore Turnpike near Berwyn, R. F. Anthony, colored, 16, of 652 L street northeast, suffered abrasions and a possible fractured ankle. He was taken to Casualty Hospital. Police said that the boy was struck by a car operated by Julius Press, 30, of Baltimore.

Among others to suffer cuts and bruises in accidents here and nearby were Vincent Lusby, 21, of 1358 North Carolina avenue northeast; Mrs. Marie Bennett, 28, of Silver Spring, Md.; John F. Gerhold, of Takoma Park, Md.

D.C. Group to Take Part In Finish Celebration

A group of Washington Finnish-Americans met yesterday in the home of Dr. J. E. Kotile, 3041 Ordway street northwest, to discuss the possibility of participating in the Delaware tercentenary celebration of the settling of Finnish colonists in America.

That Gorilla Is Gemora in His 'Monkey Suit'

Has Fooled Cash Customers for Years in Simian 'Impersonation.'

Hollywood, Jan. 30.—Anybody who pays his money to see a movie entitled "The Love Life of a Gorilla" is going to be stung, Charlie Gemora reported today. He ought to know.

He's the gorilla.

It was back in 1929 that Gemora starred as a real, live gorilla in a quickie entitled "Ingagi." The picture succeeded amazingly well, with scientists even delivering learned opinions on the conduct of its animal hero and audiences crowding to the box offices all over the country.

By the time it had earned its producers more than $1,000,000 the Will Hays office became suspicious, called Gemora in, obtained from him a confession that he was the ape, and banned the picture from the screen as a fake.

Some theaters continued to show it anyway. It ran on four years. A few months ago the name of the film was changed to "The Love Life of a Gorilla" and it began to coin money again. It ended a successful run here, in its home town, a couple of weeks ago, and even now is showing in many a second and third run American house.

"He's Me!"

"But it has the same old gorilla," he said, "and he's me."

Gemora plays movie gorillas in a suit of his own devising, which cost him about $1,000 to build, and which keeps him warm, no matter what the S. P. C. A. may say. Each hair of his costume is attached to a cloth foundation, like a fine wig.

"And I designed the head myself," he said. "My own eyes show through holes in the mask, while there is a lever which attaches the ape's mouth to my chin. When I open my own mouth, the ape shows his teeth and curls his lips."

Gemora, who is small and lithe and brown-eyed, is a sculptor by trade. He got into the ape business years ago, when Warner Brothers asked him to make a gorilla costume.

"The man they put in the suit didn't get the idea of the thing, so I got in myself" he said. "I've been an ape ever since."

Gemora has been a gorilla in such pictures as "The Unholy Three," "Murders of the Rue Morgue," and "Charlie Chan at the Circus." His next job will start Monday in Hal Roach's "Swiss Miss." His latest was at Paramount, as a makeup man for "Her Jungle Love."

"Imagine my embarrassment when I got to work," he added, "and they had me do a makeup job on Jiggs, a real chimp. That animal is the only competitor I've got."

Scares Associates.

Appearance of the horrifying Gemora in full gorilla dress has played havoc on many a studio lot. Directors have delighted in letting him appear unannounced and frightening the daylights out of the cast.

"Once they had me on a personal appearance tour," he said. "It was winter, in San Francisco, and I was standing in front of the theater with a chain around my neck. The weather was cold, but I was so bundled up inside by suit that I was perspiring.

"There was a big crowd around. A lady elbowed her way up and told my keeper that he'd better put a blanket around me, or she'd report me to the humane society, of which she was a member. I laughed so hard I shook, and she pointed at me, saying:

"See how that poor beast is shivering!"

Mal De Mer Kills "Ape".

Another time Gemora was on a steamship en route from Los Angeles to San Francisco. He was in his complete regalia again, and he had the whole ship in a dither for the first few miles. Passengers were afraid to come close, except when he was tightly chained while the Negro waiters stayed on the other side of the boat.

"Then I got seasick," he said, "and had to take off my head. I mean my ape's head. There was me, a pale green color, and everybody on that boat was mad, because I'd scared 'em."

As the only human ape in captivity. Gemora charges $800 a day to appear before the cameras.

"And that," he said, "is the real reason why I'm a gorilla. It pays—and how!"

Little

In reviving the Warner Brothers' production of "The Story of Louis Pasteur" as chief feature of the new week's bill beginning yesterday, the Little Theater brings back to view one of the most notable biographical dramas in the history of the cinema.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur" is a divergent departure from the usual screen formula of conventional drama and blazed the trail for the later "Life of Emile Zola," in which Paul Muni also was the star. The life of the great pioneer champion of prophylactics is densely crowded with dramatic incident. It not only traces the career of a genius of medicine and the founder of the present scientific practices in the field of surgical sterilization, but lends melodramatic interest to a distinctly human narrative that makes abstruse topics clear and understandable.

The drama, as goes without saying, is flawlessly acted and presented. This subject marks one of Paul Muni's major achievements before the cameras and marks, also, what may be referrd to as mileposts in the careers on the silver sheet of numerous other players who have come along to greater eminence under the impetus of this film. Among them are to be mentioned Josephine Hutchinson, as Marie Pasteur; Anita Louise, as the daughter; Donald Woods, Porter Hall, Akim Tamiroff, Halliwell Hobbes, Master Dickie Moore, Herbert Corthell and Iphigenie Castiglioni.

Others in the cast include Fritz Leiber, Henry O'Neill, Frank Reicher, Walter Kingsford and many more of equal note.

George Abbott Stops By and Explains About His Hit Farces and Companies

Famous New York Producer Drops Off in Capital on Way to Florida and Expounds Some Sound Theatrical Theories; Frederic March and Florence Eldridge Prove the 'Heroes' of the President's Birthday Celebration; Where Credit Belongs; Notes.

IT IS TOO bad about this fellow George Abbott.

With only three successful plays running on Broadway and goodness only knows how many companies on the road, Mr. Abbott finds himself in a bit of a quandary. He has so many people on his pay roll that he is just a little puzzled as to how to keep them all busy henceforth and forever. A few more good comedy scripts would help him out no end.

BELL.

At least that is the impression this column received during a brief chat with this surprising young man when he dropped into the Capital last Thursday night to see how his new "composite" troupe assembled for the Chicago run of "Room Service" might be doing at the National. He found they were doing pretty well, although there were one or two "soft spots" in the cast that he seemed to think needed stiffening just a shade. Some of the actors were "going quaint" on him and one or two had come down off their toes since he had seen them, or so he said. It hadn't been noticeable to me on Monday night. But then, as I say, this was Thursday night. Mr. Abbott was on his way to Florida, merely stopping off here to stretch his legs.

Anyway, he gave the company in "Room Service" a pep talk after the first act and then gave us another one after the second.

Having talked with Ray Bolger only a day or so before on the matter of the trip-hammer Abbott comedies—"Room Service," "Brother Rat" and "All That Glitters," to simmer it down to the current "smashes" in New York, I thought I was primed for the man. He was primed for me, instead.

George Abbott, one of the most successful contemporary producers in the living theater, does not insist on gatling-gun speed in every script he favors. He does feel, however, that the American sense of humor is the keenest and the most responsive to be found on the face of the globe. For this reason he seeks first in a play manuscript a sort of staccato succession of bright lines that will give his productions the tempo of swift farce, whereas, as a matter of fact, they can be deliberately played and not marked by that frenzied physical action that used to characterize so many of the stage's popular comedies.

It is true that in both "Brother Rat" and "Room Service"—Washington has not as yet seen "All That Glitters," although Baltimore has—the action is not cyclonic. But the lines are. There is a sense of swiftness conveyed across the footlights that reflects the quick-wittedness of the authors rather than any endowment of gymnasium acrobatics on the part of the principals. It is this quality that Mr. Abbott seeks.

Asked if he found it necessary to revise his scripts to any extent to gain this end, he expressed an emphatic negative. The writing of a play is the author's business, or the co-authors', if it happens to be a collaboration, as both "Brother Rat" and "Room Service" were. "Occasionally a line occurs to me at rehearsal that is written in, but I conceive it to be no part of the job of a producer to rewrite an author's play," is what he said. "If it hasn't got 'the stuff' to begin with, I probably won't be interested in it. If it has, the credit belongs to the writer, not to me."

But about all these people Mr. Abbott has on his pay roll. His, at the moment, probably is the most imposing roster of principals under contract to any single New York manager and producer. Rather than tear down this elaborate acting personnel, he constantly is in the market for vehicles that will serve to keep them busy. He is a pal of all his players, not a martinet or a Simon Legree. It is pleasant to meet such a chap and observe how matter-of-fact and down to earth he is. It must be pleasant, too, to work for him.

* * * *

George Abbott, in passing, is a tall, athletic-looking fellow, whom one suspects of playing a pretty good game of golf or throwing a mean left hook if he ever got the boxing gloves on—a rangy, alert and keenly observant lad, with a bit of virility and aliveness about him, if you know what I mean. I should say he must be 6 feet 1 or 2. His complexion is what is usually described as "sandy," although I wouldn't be sure that "ash-blond" isn't the better term. It was nice of Eddie Plohn, manager of the National, to let me know he was in town. Asked if he was going to stop off here on his way back from the sub-tropics, Mr. Abbott replied, "No, not unless I have a show playing here.". I hope he will have.

* * * *

"The tumult and the shouting dies,
"The captains and the kings depart."

That may be true in the case of the stars of stage, screen and radio who were visitors in the National Capital over the week-end for the President's birthday celebration—and what a coterie of superlative artists they were!—but it would be in the nature of a dereliction not to lay some stress upon the true spirit of the "trouper" revealed by one of the most distinguished of the attending luminaries.

I refer, of course, to Fredric March, eminent actor of both stage and cinema, who came to town, in company with Mrs. March (Florence Eldridge), under serious physical handicaps and the constant care of an attending physician. It was my honor to have been assigned as official escort of Mr. and Mrs. March—in company with that old war-horse of the theater, Gene Ford, former manager of Loew's Capitol—on their rounds of the Saturday night observances, a list that included a considerable number of closely scheduled stops at the leading hotels and theaters.

Because of social obligations that were as distinguished as they were obligatory, it became our duty to pick up Mr. and Mrs. March in the midst of a brilliant dinner party at a famous Washington estate. Certain of his assignments had been canceled, in deference to Mr. March's known ailment and the serious imposts it inflicted upon him. But would he accept these cancellations? Not he.

With the spirit of a gladiator, the star of "A Star Is Born," "Nothing Sacred" and the incoming "The Buccaneer," insisted on restoring all of his deleted "ports of call" and making the midnight performances at both the Earle and Capitol theaters, not to mention the "gold plate breakfast" at the Carlton.

Never have I met more delightful people of the theater than these two valiants, or enjoyed an evening more in any artists' company. An arduous task was resolved into a simple pleasure by their own unflagging enthusiasm and obvious enjoyment of a "thrilling evening." I salute two charming, literate and altogether admirable persons.

* * * *

And while we are on this lively topic, may one of the vice chairmen of the entertainment committee bestow a little credit where it is due? The success of this year's frolics in behalf of the Foundation for the fight against infantile paralysis is, of course, due primarily to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, general chairman, and Richmond B. Keech, his "right hand," who had the whole thing under their personal control. On the entertainment committee that succeeded in bringing Mr. and Mrs. March, Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Joe E. Brown, Maria Gambarelli, Vera Zorina, Patricia Bowman, Janet Gaynor, Master Tommy Kelly, little Miss Ann Gillis, Paul Gerrits, Louise Fazenda, Ken Murray and Oswald and all the rest into the celebrations, the brunt of the work was borne by my esteemed confrere, Judge Andrew R. Kelley, chairman, and that friend through more years than either of us wishes to count, Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's. They did a magnificent job. The rest of us just sort of stood around to see that nobody got hurt.

Blouses Go Slack For Next Season

Tuck-in blouses are through as far as slacks are concerned. This is the opinion of Betty Furness who is wearing her new 1938 slack suits with the blouses hanging on the outside. It gives a quaint, peasant effect and proves more feminine.

Right above, Fredric March, also a President's Birthday celebration visitor, with Mrs. March (Florence Eldridge), and Franciska Gaal, as they appear in Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Buccaneer," opening its regular run on the Palace screen on Friday. Inset, Paul Gerrits, nimble-witted roller-skater, who mastered ceremonies at the Earle and Capitol midnight shows Saturday and will be seen later in the season as a stellar stage act at a local theater.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Jan. 30. — '38 — Idol Chatter: Seems incredible, but Arthur Treacher appears just as languid off-screen as on. William S. Hart is no longer star, but point a camera in his direction and he automatically goes for a gun. Great excitement in Canoga Park when Ranchowner Mae West appears in slacks. Real names: Paul Muni was born Muni Weisenfreund. Fred Astaire always reminds me of a caricature of Stan Laurel—and vice versa.

* * * *

Address any questions about Hollywood's unmarried ingenues to Johnny Downs—he dates them all. Cited for the Croix de Merite: Wendy Barrie—defying all stellar precedent, she is always punctual in keeping her appointments. Publicity stories telling how Claudette Colbert must eat rich foods in order to keep from losing weight must be thorns in the flesh of most lady stars. Hope no one will accuse me of advertising a Paramount picture when I warn you that the costume Dorothy Lamour is wearing in her latest weighs exactly four ounces.

* * * *

Sonja Heinie is the only femme star in Hollywood who has made a male stand-in. Kay Francis, considered the "best-dressed" star, is militant in her belief that Filmville's shops are superior to those in Paris and New York. Clipped from today's publicity barrage: "the favorite card game of Jed Prouty is Mah Jong."

* * * *

In the Paramount cafe today we were discussing Carole Lombard's rise as a comedienne and Harold Lloyd made the observation in the entire history of Hollywood, there have been only two great women comedy stars, Lombard, Colbert, Dunne and all of the others who are currently causing the world to laugh, he disqualified on the ground that they play in comedy drama, not in real comedies. The two who rate are Louise Fazenda and the late Marie Dressler. In view of the great number of male slapstick stars who have climbed to screen heights, his observation is startling. We finally agreed that the probable reason is the natural feminine wish to be "pretty." Perhaps some psychologist among the readers of this column can advance a better explanation.

* * * *

A freckled little scamp who sells newspapers on a Hollywood street corner told me this story—and I am retelling it simply because so many columnists have referred to Jeanette MacDonald as a woman whose ambition has made her "cold." The other day Freckles was playing in the street near his home with a couple of boys and his dog. Around the corner raced a car, and the dog, struck a glancing blow, was flung the width of the street. "And then another car came along and Jeanette MacDonald was in it," he told me. "Gee, she was swell. She stopped and when I told her what had happened, she took my dog to the same hospital where she takes hers when they are sick. And she told me that the doctor there would make him well and it won't cost me anything." We columnists would have a tough time trying to convince that boy that Jeanette is "cold."

When Charles Farrell realized that his heyday as a screen star was past, he invested a considerable amount of money in Palm Springs real estate. And today the young man whom Hollywood always regarded as an "irresponsible" is sitting on top of the world. Palm Springs, booming like a mushroom, considers him its most substantial citizen; his real estate enterprises there are paying him a new fortune; he is as full of plans for new subdivisions as a sardine can is full of fish. Watching him as he pedals his bike down the main drag in Palm Springs, I am sure of one thing—he is far happier than he was as a Hollywood star.

The Post's New Yorker By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Jan. 30.

HELP WANTED: For more than three years, at the Holy Angel Academy in Fort Lee, N. J., Patricia Bird studied stenography and typewriting. Then, when she despaired of finding a secretarial job, Patricia became a cigarette girl in the Broadway night clubs, and for the last three months has been working at La Conga . . . At midnight last night one of the patrons stopped her and asked: "In what month were you born?" . . . In May," Patricia replied . . . "That's Taurus, the Bull," the man muttered—then, without further inquiry, instructed: Phone me at my home in the morning. You're my new secretary" . . . He was Tommy Manville!

CRIME DEPT.: Within the next two weeks the right of Archibald Watson to sit as a member of the lunacy commission examining Robert Irwin, the confessed Gedeon slayer, will be challenged by defense counsel. Watson is dean of the New York Law School, editor of the N. Y. Law Journal and the new county clerk . . . The challenge will be based on the ground that Watson is occupying two city positions at the same time.

* * * *

POLITICS: Congressman Bruce Barton contributed $25 to the Grover Cleveland Democratic Club for its athletic games held Saturday night. The Grover Cleveland Democratic Club, in the 15th A. D., is the organization which put up and backed Barton's Democratic opponent in the November election.

* * * *

MOVIES: Merritt Hulburd, who left the Sam Goldwyn organization—where, as associate producer, he was responsible for such hits as "Dead End," "Stella Dallas" and "Hurricane"—held a farewell conference with Goldwyn just before he entrained East, and after his resignation had been accepted . . . "Well," Goldwyn finally sighed, "after all these years with me, you're quitting" . . . They shook hands, and Hulburd said: "Good-by, Mr. Goldwyn" . . . "Good-by," Goldwyn replied, "Good-by, Mr. . . . Mr. Hulburd—that's it, Hulburd!"

* * * *

OBITUARY DEPT.: The Associated Press will provide for the family of Eddie Neil, the reporter who was killed while covering the war in Spain . . . A. P. will set up a $25,000 trust fund for his young son. Mrs. Neil will receive $150 a month for the next five years.

* * * *

GAME & HUNT DEPT.: The famous pigeons which for three years had been living on the balcony outside the Rainbow Room, 65 stories above the street, are no more. They were taken in a limousine to a farm in Huntington, Long Island, where their wings were cut. The birds will be kept in close confinement for two weeks—so that they'll forget about, and not fly back to, the Rainbow Room.

* * * *

TAX DEPT.: Paul Sifton, when he was a dramatist, had one of his plays rejected by the Theater Union . . . Mr. Sifton now heads the unemployment insurance division for New York State . . . He now is being called upon, in his official capacity, to determine whether the Theater Union is a non-profit-making enterprise, and therefore free from paying taxes for unemployment insurance.

* * * *

THEATER DEPT.: The Cole Porter-Clifton Webb show, "By Candle Light," practically has become a "Gone With the Wind." First Libby Holman was signed. Then Marlene Dietrich was considered for the leading role, but Tallulah Bankhead won it. Talu quit, and now Miriam Hopkins is being tried for the role . . . At this time, however, the part was being offered to Beatrice Lillie . . . And yesterday, Libby Holman returned her contract.

* * * *

TRAVEL DEPT.: Charles Bickford came East from Hollywood, to portray the role of Engineer Casey Jones in the Group Theater's forthcoming "Casey Jones" . . . Throughout the entire train-ride East, Bickford rode in the locomotive with the engineer.

* * * *

DRAMA DEPT.: Ed Wynn visited the Empire Theater to see the Lillian Gish-Burgess Meredith show, "Star Wagon." Wynn's son, Keenan, was signed for the show last week, and is giving an excellent performance . . . The veteran star, proud of his son's accomplishment, then went backstage, and when he emerged the autograph hunters descended upon him . . . "Look, look," Wynn enthused, "they think I'm Lillian Gish."

* * * *

SOCIAL NOTES: Moss Hart arrived in Hollywood last week and, as is the custom, immediately was swamped with telephone invitations to dinner . . . "No more phone calls," he instructed his butler. "I've had enough" . . . "Very good, sir," the butler agreed . . . Ten minutes later the phone rang. The butler lifted the receiver, and, automatically announced: "Moss Hart's residence" . . . "Is this Moss Hart's home?" the voice asked . . . "Yes," the butler answered . . . "Is Moss Hart there?" the voice continued . . . "Who?" asked the butler . . . "Moss Hart," was the reply . . . "Moss Hart?" the butler countered. "Never heard of him"—and hung up.

FINANCIAL DEPT.: Leo Bulgakov, the movie director who now is directing the Federal Theater's "Prologue to Glory," has had a casting problem. He was told of a young actor, now playing in London, who could fill the role. Bulgakov went into action. "Cable him," he shrieked, "send for him to come over immdiately. Let's not forget anything" . . . "That's right, Mr. Bulgakov," the officials warned. "Just let's not forget that this is the WPA—and not Hollywood."

The real "daily double" at the Gayety Theater this week is the combination of Diane Johnson, a lovely blonde personality, and Mike Sacks, the best of the "Muggers" and one of the funniest comedians in burlesque.

Miss Johnson, whose repeated engagements at this house continue to gain her a host of followers, has never appeared more charming. Diane not only sings in her own inimitable manner but proves that she is a valuable person to have around in the many comedy scenes that punctuate the bill. All in all, Miss Johnson is a clever worker and the more we see of her the better we like it.

Comedians can come and go, but Mike Sacks still has plenty of what it takes to make an audience laugh. Assisted by the clever Alice Kennedy, Mike offers many amusing moments, his piano personality being one of the highlights of an entertaining performance.

Charmaine turns out to be an average "strip tease" artist who makes several appearances without really causing any pictures to fall off the wall or the fans out of their seats. She is, however, a nice looking lass.

Ruth Brown, a talented little toe dancer, offers some novelty steps in the ballet numbers, while an unusually pretty line of girls make up the chorus. The setting and lighting of acts are quite in keeping with the spirit of the entire affair. And the wardrobe and music are much above par.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Sixteen.

HIS JOB AS MANAGER of the New York Yankees began to lose its attraction for Griffith in 1907, when, for the first time in 5 years, he met with front-office interference.

With Frank Farrell, owner of the Yankees, Griffith had always been friendly and was friendly to the last. Farrell, whose interests ranged from Tammany Hall politics to horse racing, was an indulgent club owner who operated his baseball team as something of a hobby. For Griffith he had the highest regard and at no time, during the first four years of their relationship, did he question his manager's judgment in any matter.

In fact, throughout Griffith's six-year term as manager of the Highlanders, he never signed a manager's contract with Farrell. The word of the Highlander's owner was sufficient contract for Griffith, who drew a $6,000 yearly salary from Farrell.

But, during the disastrous 1907 season, when the Highlanders finished fifth, Farrell's friends of the political and racing world moved in on his baseball interests. Occuping a special box at the Highlander's games, they formed a sort of baseball "cabinet" for Owner Farrell and demanded a new managerial deal for the Highlanders.

Thus second-guessed, semi-officially, Griffith became weary of his New York job, despite Farrell's reassurance that the Highlander's management belonged to him as long as he cared to accept it.

Griffith stepped out as manager of the New York team in midseason of 1908 but, had he been able to foresee the possibilities of one rookie pitcher, he might have remained as the successful manager of the New York team for a full score of years.

Late in the season of 1907 Griffith was advised by letter from a friend on the Pacific Coast that a hulking young right-handed pitcher in an Idaho semi-pro league would be a sure-fire sensation in the majors. He could be had merely for the price of transportation to New York.

Griffith Misses Chance to Sign Walter Johnson.

LETTERS OF THAT TYPE, Griffith had received by the score. Rookie pitchers were being touted by self-styled scouts all over the country. The letter did not rate an answer. But two weeks later, when his pitching problem with the Highlanders became downright acute, Griffith decided to take a long chance and invite the Idaho rookie to come to New York for a tryout.

But Griffith was too late. A Washington scout named Blankenship had already signed the big Idaho lad four days before. The name of the pitcher thus lost to the New York club was Walter Perry Johnson.

On June 24, 1908, after being banished from the field at Philadelphia by the umpire for repeatedly rushing on the diamond to protest decisions, Clark Griffith resigned as manager of the New York Highlanders.

His rout by the umpire was no factor in Griffith's decision to quit as the Yankee manager, but the current slump of his New York ball team was, for, in their last 24 games, Griffith's Yankees had taken the worst nose-dive in major league baseball history.

Feeling keenly his failure to do better with the Yankees, Griffith telephoned Owner Farrell in New York that he was stepping down as manager. Farrell reassured Griffith that his resignation was not necessary, that he did not wish to make a change in managers. But Griffith was insistent and Farrell appointed Norman "Kid" Elberfeld, the team's shortstop, as Griffith's successor. Under Elberfeld, the Yankees lost no more ground that season. They hardly could. Griffith left them in eighth place and they finished in eighth place.

Managership of Cincinnati Reds Offered Griffith.

FIRST TO OFFER GRIFFITH another managerial job was Garry Herrmann, wealthy owner of the Cincinnati Reds and, at the time, chairman of the National Baseball Commission. That title gave to Herrmann more authority than any man in organized baseball.

Griffith was reluctant to accept the management of the Cincinnati team. The thought of transferring his allegiance to the National League was repugnant to the fiery fellow whose baseball career, for several years, had been marked by his steady battling against the National League during the formative years of the younger organization.

When Griffith rejected Herrmann's offer of the management of the Reds in 1909, the Cincinnati owner begged him to delay a final decision. He asked Griffith to finish the season with the Reds in a scouting capacity. Griffith, still hopeful that he could gain a managerial berth in the American League, accepted Herrman's latter offer.

Unbeknown to Manager John Ganzel, of the Reds, Griffith scouted the Cincinnati team for Owner Herrmann throughout the final months of 1908, with a view to recommending changes and improvements for the following season's play. Griffith paid his way into all Cincinnati games, often sat in the bleachers while appraising the Reds for Owner Herrmann.

As the 1908 season neared a close, Griffith learned that the management of the Washington Club would be vacant. His friend of the old Pacific Coast days, Joe Cantillon, was planning to resign as the Washington manager.

To Ban Johnson, president of the American League, Griffith made known his desire for the job in Washington. Griffith was confident that his friend, Johnson, would give him the appointment, in recognition of his aid in founding the American League in 1901. Thus he reserved his decision on the Cincinnati offer.

First Cuban Ball Player Signed by New Manager of Reds.

TO GRIFFITH'S COMPLETE SURPRISE and great chagrin, League President Johnson contrived to transfer Jimmy McAleer, St. Louis manager, to Washington, ignoring Griffith's request. In some heat at this seeming ingratitude of Johnson, Griffith cast his lot with the National League and accepted the Cincinnati management.

Griffith's three-year term at Cincinnati was chiefly notable, perhaps, for his acquisition of a star Cuban rookie, the first islander to make good in big league baseball.

Secretary Bancroft, of the Cincinnati Club, in an off-season tour to Havana, had watched several Cuban ball games and returned to Cincinnati with glowing tales of the skill of Rafael Almeida, a Cuban third baseman. So persistent was Bancroft, that Griffith finally agreed to give the Cuban a tryout.

"Will not come to Cincinnati unless expenses of my interpreter are also paid."

Merely to satisfy Bancroft, Griffith agreed that the Cuban rookie be permitted the expense of an interpreter and, in due time, the Cuban pair showed up at the Reds park for Almeida's tryout. To Griffith's surprise, the interpreter also trotted on the field in uniform and shagged flies in the outfield while Almeida was given a thorough test both at bat and in the field.

Bancroft waxed enthusiastic as he watched the Cuban third baseman maneuver around the bag and take a beauteous cut at the ball. In the manner of Cuban ball players, he doffed his cap at each applause, and bowed deeply whenever approached.

"That Almeida looks great, doesn't he, Griff?" Bancroft asked.

"No," said Griffith simply. "That matador is no account. But that interpreter of his out there in the outfield; I've been watching him. Sign him to a contract right away. He's a ball player."

Thus did Armando Marsans, regular Cincinnati outfielder for several years, find his way into the big leagues.

TOMORROW: After three years with Cincinnati, Washington beckons to Clark Griffith in 1911.

25,000 See Maxie Take 12-Rounder

By the Associated Press.

Hamburg, Jan. 30.—Max Schmeling, Germany's perennial heavyweight title contender, smashed and battered Ben Foord, of South Africa, in the last six rounds this afternoon to take a 12-round decision before a crowd of 25,000.

Schmeling, who weighed 192.9 to Foord's 207, did everything but floor his rival. He took nine of the 12 rounds and from the sixth round on drove a steady barrage of jolting rights and lefts to Foord s body and bloody face.

Foord's coura in the closing rounds, when he withstood the Tetuton Schlager's bid for a knockout, drew roars of applause from the crowd, which was somewhat disappointed when its idol, Schmeling, failed to score a knockout in his first appearance in a German ring in two years.

Schmeling, as in his first "warm-up" bout for Joe Louis against Harry Thomas in New York, started slowly. He seemed intent on perfecting his timing and footwork in the opening rounds and smiled frequently at Foord's efforts to connect with wild lefts and rights.

Max Starts in Sixth.

The German, who meets Louis for the heavyweight title in the United States this summer, did not get going until the sixth. Then he gave the crowd, which included high Nazi officials and a large British delegation, something to watch.

His famed right came into play and put Foord on the defensive. From the sixth round to the tenth he punched Foord around the ring and had the South African in trouble at the end of the tenth.

Schmeling, a master of pace, bid for the knockout in the eleventh but couldn't quite connect. He bounced Foord off the ropes with a series of terrific rights but Foord gamely fought back. He eased down in the final round as Foord, in a desperate effort to stay the limit, staved off the German's attack.

Crowd Cheers Max.

The crowd, which had expected a bout like Schmeling's eight-round knockout of Thomas, nevertheless cheered him lustily when he left the ring escorted by a group of Adolf Hitler's blackshirt guards. Both Foord and Schmeling gave the Nazi salute after climbing through the ropes.

Schmeling was unmarked save for a small cut under his left eye but Foord was bleeding from cuts over both eyes and on the lips. There were no knockdowns.

Foord, former British Empire heavyweight champion, lost the title to Tommy Farr, of Wales, and was knocked out by Max Baer. Schmeling may fight one more bout in preparation for his meeting with Louis.

Schmeling said he regarded the victory as "the best preparation in the world" for Louis because both Foord and Louis use the same style of fighting, stressing a left jab.

Cracks His Knuckle.

Schmeling's face showed only a few signs of the 12 rounds of battling, but he cracked the knuckle on his right thumb on Foord's head in the fourth round. Although the knuckle was painful and swollen, Max Machon, Schmeling's trainer, said the injury was not serious. Schmeling, however, noticeably favored it when shaking hands with well wishers.

Max credited Foord with being "clever and brave" and said he was "very satisfied that the bout went the full route since it is a part of my training program for the title fight with Louis to get in as many good workouts as possible."

Machon said future plans for the German heavyweight are indefinite but squelched talk of a possible match with Walter Neusel.

Joe Jacobs 'Very Glad;' Plans Dudas Bout

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Joe Jacobs, American manager of Max Schmeling, said today he was "very glad" Max's bout with Ben Foord had lasted 12 rounds, and announced that Schmeling's next opponent would be Steve Dudas, New Jersey heavyweight.

"I'm very much satisfied with the result," said Jacobs. "Max needed a good workout and from accounts of the fight I guess he bounced Foord around plenty in taking the decision. I was somewhat worried when I saw he was down to 192 or so for the bout. He has been training for eight weeks since late November, four weeks here for the Thomas fight and four weeks abroad for the bout with Foord. I was afraid he might be stale.

"I intend to have him rest for at least a month. Dudas will be his next opponent but I don't know where the fight will be held. Los Angeles, New York and Berlin are possibilities. His victory over Bob Olin marks Dudas as a much improved fighter and I think it will be a good match."

Foord Is Offered Bout in New York

Hamburg, Germany, June 30 (U.P.). Ben Foord's manager, Louis Walsh, said tonight he had received a cable from Promoter Mike Jacobs offering Foord a bout with the winner of the Tony Galento-Harry Thomas bout at Madison Square Garden, February 18.

Walsh said he had not answered yet as he also was considering an offer for Foord to appear in London.

Cooper Wins $5,000 Open At Oakland

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 30.—Harry Cooper, living up to his reputation as one of the toughest competitors in golf, turned in a par smashing finish today to win the $5,000 Oakland tournament with a 72-hole total of 275.

While four thousand fans looked on, Cooper rolled down a nine-foot putt on the last hole for an eagle three and top money of $1,200. It was the most thrilling wind-up in the history of the tournament. Only an eagle three on the 453-yard finishing hole could decide the issue.

The English-born professional, leading money winner of 1937, split the fairway on his drive; banged a No. 3 wood to the green and tapped the ball into the cup.

Cut Par Two Strokes

Cooper's final round of 68 clipped two strokes off par for the 5,932-yard Sequoyah course and his 32 on the incoming nine was three shots under standard figures. He put together four rounds as follows: 70-66-71-68. His second round 66 was the lowest of the tournament. Par for the layout is 35-35.

Cooper, now registered from Chicopee, Mass., won the tournament by a one-stroke margin. Tied for second place were Jimmy Hines of Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., and Charley Sheppard of Pleasanton, Calif.

Hines, leader for three rounds, faltered on his final test to take a 73, while Sheppard moved into a tie with a 67 and 276 total. Hines and Sheppard divided second and third money, amounting to $650 for each.

Putting trouble cost Hines the victory. He blew up on the incoming nine to take a 37. Sheppard, meanwhile, clubbed out the greatest last nine score of the three days of play by posting a 31 to go with his outgoing 36.

Hines Off in Final.

Hines' four rounds were 67—67—69—73; Sheppard's, 72—69—68—67.

Johnny Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., finished fourth with 277, while Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., took fifth with 279.

Ben Hogan, Fort Worth, Tex., and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., tied for sixth position at 280 even par for the four rounds.

Among the "big name" pre-tournament favorites who failed to land in the money division were Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware; Lawson Little, San Francisco, former amateur champion; Horton Smith, Chicago, and Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa.

Thomson, winner of the recent $8,000 Los Angeles Open, and Little failed to turn in last round cards after messing up their third eighteens. Smith's last round 71, gave him a total score of 289, while Nel-

Redskins Win, 17-10, In Tilt With All-Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 30.—Slinging Sammy Baugh nad running Cliff Battles joined hands to give the Washington Redskins, pro-grid champions of the world, a narrow 17-10 victory over the Southwest All-Stars here this afternoon.

Sammy, with his passing, and Battles, with a sensational 74-yard touchdown gallop, accounted for the two touchdowns which gave the pros their win.

They clashed with a squad which was made up almost entirely of pro players, youths who went up from the Southwest, but who since have joined clubs throughout the East.

The All-Stars got away to a running, or rather a kicking, start early in the first quarter when one of Baugh's punts fizzled and went out of bounds on the Washington 36.

On fourth down, Tillie Manton, former teammate of Baugh on the Texas Christian Horned Toads, dropped back to the 38-yard line, and booted a placement, which, although partially blocked, sailed over the cross bars for a 3-0 margin.

Battles Scores.

That held until late in the same period. Then Cecil Isbell, Purdue star who is a Houston youth, quick-kicked from his 20 to the Washington 26. Battles took the ball, with two All-Stars bearing down on him. Sammy Baugh took them both out with a great block, and Battles cut over to the sidelines. He streaked his way clear of all except the safety man, and he went out with a perfect block by huge Turk Edwards, giving him a touchdown.

The second touchdown came in the same period. Baugh rifled a 17-yard pass to Riley Smith who was downed on the 1-yard line, and Don Irwin crashed over to paydirt, to make it 14 to 3.

"Dutch" Kline, another former teammate of Baugh, chalked up the final All-Star counter. A pass from Paterson bounced in the air from the fingers of Britt, and Kline took it at full gallop to run 60 yards for a touchdown, making it 14 to 10.

Smith Boots Goal.

The All-Stars threatened in the closing minutes of play, when Carl Brazell, of Baylor, intercepted one of Baugh's passes and raced to the Redskin 27. There the Star serial attack bogged down.

Yacht Gale Star Winner

Takes Second and Third in Havana Series.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Jan. 30.—Harry G. Nye, jr., of Wilmette Harbor, Ill., skipper of the southern Lake Michigan fleet entry, Gale, won the Bacardi Cup series in the international star class regatta today.

Sailing with Leeds Mitchell, jr., as his crewman, Nye won both the second and third races today after trailing Adrian Iselin's western Long Island Sound entry, Ace, in the opening race yesterday.

Ace could finish no better than third in today's two races as the Havana yachtsman, Charles de Cardenas, brought Kurush home second each time. The final point standing was the same, Gale first with 41 points, and Kurush and Ace trailing with 38 each. Kurush was awarded second place according to the rule on ties, which gives the better place to the yacht which beat the other the greatest number of times.

Gradually increasing the lead in the final race, Gale crossed the finish line five minutes and 27 seconds ahead of Kurush, which beat out Ace by 13 seconds for second place. Gale's time was 1:30:15.

Behind the three leaders this afternoon came Cesar Fuentes' Jibaro, of Havana, with 30 points; Melody, sailed by Paul H. Smart, central Long Island Sound, 10; Chuckle, Harold Halstead, Moriches Bay, N. Y., 9; Lia III, Roberto Karman, Havana, 14; Ariel II, Giullermo Alamilla, Havana, 16, and Carmita, Luis R. Miranda, Havana, 18.

Mancuso and Moore Balk; Rap Front Office

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 30.—Two of "Terrible" Bill Terry's ball players—Gus Mancusco and Joe Moore—said today the New York Giants' front office sadly underestimated their baseball abilities when they were mailed 1938 contracts.

Mancusco, swarthy catcher, said flatly he would hold out before he would accept the cut in salary offered, and Outfielder Moore said he was offered the same figure as in 1937, which was extremely distasteful.

"I want a raise," he said.

A third Giant, Harry Gumbert, pitcher, declined to discuss his contract, but said he "expected to come to terms soon."

Mancusco said Terry in a recent magazine article reported he never reduced salaries of deserving players.

"But he is trying to cut my salary," he protested. "And I'm not going to take it. I've given five years of good service to the Giants and if they don't meet my 1937 figure, I'll become a holdout."

Mancusco would not disclose his salary of last year, but it is estimated at $12,500.

The catcher, former sandlotter here, said he had read stories linking him in trade gossip and said that may be the reason for the reduced contract.

"I'd be easier to trade if I'd sign at a reduced figure, but I won't," he insisted. "If I'm to play for another club it will be at the figure I received for 1937."

Mungo Deal 'Cold,' Rival Clubs State

Cubs and Giants Recall Bids for Brooklyn's Ace Pitcher.

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 30.—National League magnates and managers gathered here tonight for the baseball writers' annual dinner unanimously agreed that Van Mungo, Brooklyn's bad boy who has promised to turn over a new leaf, will remain with the Dodgers.

Retention of Mungo, temperamental fireball pitcher, by the Dodgers means that the balance of power among the four leading contenders—Giants, Cubs, Cardinals and Pirates—will not be destroyed. Mungo added to any of those four clubs would make that team an outstanding favorite to capture the National League flag and possibly destroy the traditional blanket finish.

The two leading bidders for Mungo, the Cardinals and Cubs, have called off all negotiations for the big Brooklyn hurler.

"We are no longer interested in Mungo," said Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals.

Deal Cold.

Both Rickey and Rowland agreed that it will be better for baseball and Brooklyn that Mungo remains in Flatbush.

"We don't have any reason to believe that Dizzy Dean will stage a comeback," said Rickey. "We consider him in the same light as when he finished the season complaining of a sore arm. Right now our pitching staff consists of Warneke and Weiland and 15 other guys."

As the official spokesman for the Cubs, Rowland said, "we are all ready to go with what we have. We figure we are the club to beat and don't plan any deals."

Cincinnati Most Active.

The most active of the National League clubs is Cincinnati, with Business Manager Warren C. Giles and Manager Will McKechnie trying desperately to swing a deal to add punch to the Reds. McKechnie held conferences today with Bill Terry and Casey Stengel, but was unable to make any headway.

"I doubt if there's any chance of us making a deal with the Giants," said Giles. "Terry and McKechnie are so far apart in their valuation of the players discussed that it seems doubtful if they can get together. We will discuss other trades with every club in the league."

More than 1,000 baseball writers, managers, officials and their guests attended the annual Baseball Writers Dinner at the Hotel Commodore tonight. Joe DiMaggio was awarded a plaque as "The player of the year" and Commissioner K. M. Landis was presented with an award of merit for his outstanding services over a period of years.

Pro Cards Sign Star.

New Orleans, Jan. 30 (AP).—Norman Hall, a star guard at Tulane for three years, and cocaptain of last season's Green Wave, today said that he had signed a contract to play football with the professional Chicago Cardinals. He will join Gaynell Tinsley, Pat Coffee and "Rock" Reed, former Louisiana State University stars and his old rivals, on the squad.

Leaves Ring 'In Fairness' To Family

Former Champion Plans 'Business Venture;' Thanks All.

By the Associated Press.

The 32-year-old boxer, who has been fighting since 1926, explained that "in fairness to my wife and children, I believe it is time to withdraw."

There has been talk of Braddock's retirement ever since he lost the heavyweight crown to Joe Louis last summer by a knockout in a battle in which he took a fearful beating.

"I won my last fight," the announcement said. "And I believe I can beat most of the contenders for the heavyweight title."

He revealed that he plans "another business venture, details of which I will announce later."

Won Title in 1935.

The "Cinderella Man" of boxing, Braddock won the heavyweight crown from Max Baer in 1935, climaxing a comeback campaign which led from a job as a dock worker in Jersey City after he had been definitely counted out of the fight picture.

He paid tribute to his manager and "pal," Joe Gould, with whom he has been constantly associated in his ring career. The two have been so close that they are known as the "Damon and Pythias" of the ring throughout the fight world.

"In reaching my decision to withdraw from the game," he said, "I have the support and advice of Joe Gould—my manager and my friend.

"In fairness to everyone, but especially to my wife and children, I believe I should retire.

"I take this opportunity to thank those who have been so thoughtful of me in my long career; the fight fans, without whose encouragement I could not have succeeded, the boxing commissions of New York and other States, and also the newspapermen."

Will Continue Interest.

"My retirement from the ring," he added, "does not mean the end of my professional association with Joe Gould. I will be as helpful to him as I can in the management of other boxers, and he and I will engage in another business enterprise.

"This is my farewell to boxing, a sport which owes me nothing, and to which I owe everything, the many friends I have made and the means with which I have been able to provide for my family."

Braddock makes his exit from the ring while fans are still talking about one of the gamest displays the big fellows have ever put on. Always noted for his fighting heart, particularly in the manner in which he stood up and slugged with Louis last summer, Braddock outpointed Farr, the Welsh champion, on January 21, in ten rounds in Madison Square Garden.

Hopelessly behind on points through the first eight rounds, Jersey Jim came back to take the play away in the ninth and tenth frames and win the decision.

Courage Undoubted.

Since then, Promoter Mike Jacobs has been trying to sign Jim either for a fight with Baer or a return bout with Farr.

His gallant courage and the fact that he so often came through on the short end of the betting, and against such tremendous odds, were Braddock's outstanding contributions to the ring.

Starting in as a light heavyweight in 1926, he engaged in 84 fights, won 26 by knockouts and 25 by decisions. He drew in five, was outpointed 19 times and fought seven no-decision contests. He was stopped by the technical knockout route by Lou Scozza in six rounds in 1932, and was knocked out by Louis in eight in Chicago last June, after putting the Brown Bomber on the floor with a right hand in the second round.

In most of his big fights, Jim Braddock has been the prebout underdog. He outpointed Pete Latzo in 1928, when he was a 4-1 shortender; he stopped Tuffy Griffiths, an 8-to-1 shot, the same year; he knocked out Jimmy Slattery, a 5-1 favorite, in 1929.

Tommy Loughran started Braddock on the down grade by outpointing him in a 15-round light heavyweight fight in 1929. Then, after cracking his hand against Abe Feldman's head in 1933, he vanished from the ring—many thought forever.

Lost Ring Earnings.

His ring earnings were swept away by a taxicab company bankruptcy and the stock market crash, so Jim took a job on the Jersey docks, and even was forced to accept $310 in relief money for his family. (He has three children).

On a day's notice, the fight promoters dug Jim out of oblivion to fill in against Corn Griffin, a 1934 heavyweight contender. Griffin was a 5-to-1 favorite and Braddock knocked him out in three rounds.

After Griffin, he outpointed John Henry Lewis, the present light-heavyweight champion, and then defeated Art Lasky, at that time the No 1 challenger for Max Baer's title. As a result, he was given his big chance, a shot at Baer.

Baer was a top-heavy 10-to-1 favorite the night they fought in June, 1935, but Braddock was thinking of his "hungry days on the docks," and he outpunched and outjabbed the titleholder to win the crown and return to the big money.

Rovers Win, 3 to 1.

Terry and the Boys 'Get Together.'

By Shirley Povich.

(News item—"Bill Terry and baseball writers bury hatchet. In his first meeting with the New York Writers since his recent magazine article blasting them, 'Sweet William' made no mention of the fuss but was more pleasant than at any previous time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant."

Imaginary Interview No. 12.

TERRY: "Hello, boys, nice to see you How is every little thing? (I suppose I've got to stick around a while now and talk to these bums.)"

POVICH.

THE WRITERS:" Hi' ya, Bill, old boy, old boy. Can't stay away from the big city, can you? Heh, heh. (Why, the low-down ingrate, he's just come back here to rub it in after that story in the Saturday Evening Post.)"

TERRY: "What's new, Joe. How's the family? (What do I care about his family? He's the $40-a-week-bum who tried to run me out of baseball back in 1925.)"

FIRST WRITER: "Wife and baby are swell, Bill. You know I named him William (Yeah, but not after you, ya swell-headed big shot. He's named after his mother's uncle. There's a mean-looking pup in our litter that's going to be named Bill Terry.)"

TERRY: "I see the baseball writers annual blow-out is on tomorrow night. That's a party I'd never miss. You fellows sure do put it over. (Wish to hell I was back in Memphis. I don't see why Stoneham always wants me to go to those baseball writers' dinners. I'd rather see a good 40-cent burlesque show.)

SECOND WRITER: "Yeah, Bill, we're certainly glad you're in town for the party. We always make it a point to have the pennant-winning managers on hand. (That lucky stiff's club wouldn't finish in the first division in the American League. Joe Blow could win the pennant in the National League if he had Hubbell on his club.)"

TERRY: "You're getting fat, Dan. Stop crowding that plate, heh, heh. We'll have to cut down on your grub at training camp. Saw a friend of yours in Memphis —Sam Smithers. Great guy, that Sam, eh wot? (What'n 'ell's this guy's last name. Never can remember it. But the bum has been second-guessing me ever since I came into this town. How he holds his job, with that drivel he writes, I dunno.)"

FIRST WRITER: "How do the Giants look to ya, Bill? You don't look worried about next season's pennant race. (No, but he had better be. If Hubbell flops, that Terry will be lucky to finish fifth. If he wins another pennant, he won't be able to get his head through the door. Gawd, deliver us.)"

TERRY: "What's been going on in town? Haven't seen a New York paper for weeks. (Hell I haven't. Did those guys burn about my magazine blast at 'em! Their stuff has been sizzling for a week. 'S funny they haven't mentioned my story.)"

SECOND WRITER: "Been kinda dull around here, Bill. Nothing much going on. Outside of DiMaggio's holdout, we've had to dig for something to write. (That tripe he wrote last week will keep us in fuel a month. 'S funny he hasn't brought it up.)"

TERRY: "Yeah, I guess it has been dull. I've always wondered how you fellows find stuff to write about in the off-season. It must be hard digging. (Why, the wretches ought to be grateful for that sizzler I laid in their laps. I did 'em a favor. But the two grand I dragged down for the piece offsets it, I guess.)"

FIRST WRITER: "You sure are looking swell, Bill. Look like you can step right out there tomorrow and go to work at first base. (If he ever gets in shape, I'll be surprised. With that blubber around his middle he can't bend far enough to touch his knees. If he tries to play first base the Giants won't finish in the league.)"

TERRY: "Well, you know me; I always keep in shape. I always said I wouldn't quit until a better first baseman comes along. (Is he trying to kid me? He knows damn well I'm washed up as a player. He's the same punk who was writing last season that I was letting in more runs than I drove in.)"

SECOND WRITER: "I don't like to bring it up, Bill, but do you think it'll be another nickel world series between the Giants and the Yanks in 1938? (I guess that'll hold him. If he can forget what the Yankees did to him in that last series, he's a wonder. Nickel series was right. That's all it was worth to watch the Giants.)"

TERRY: "Well, boys, you know how it is. I don't like to brag, but I'm thinking it'll be another nickel series if the Yankees win the pennant in their league. (Say, if this guy's trying to get gay with me, he's crazy. I can buy and sell punks like him. He'll still be pounding a typewriter for forty a week when I have my first million")."

THIRD WRITER: "How about that big boy of yours, Bill. I understand he's got talent. Are you gonna let him be a ball player? (One Terry in baseball is one too many.)"

TERRY: "Well, I don't know about that. Living up to the old man's name might be tough on the kid. But if he wants to be a ball player I guess I can't stop him. (If he doesn't get that foolishness out of his head I'll beat it out). What time is it? Geez, boys, I gotta be going. Glad I had a chance to see ya all. (Ya mugs.)"

THE WRITERS: (In chorus)—"So long Bill, old pal. (Nuts to you.)"

Local Heavy On Short End Of 3-1 Odds

Foes Will Enter Ring at About Equal Weight; Bout 10 Rounds.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

One of the most promising youngsters on the fistic horizon, despite his recent knockout at the hands of Nathan Mann, and one of the two men to go the route with Joe Louis since the sepia socker won the heavyweight crown, Pastor enters the ring a prohibitive 3-1 favorite. On form he looks like the winner, even if form doesn't always run true.

Pastor comes up to the fight with two good scraps under his belt, a decision over Hans Haverlick, and two-round knockout at Buck Tracy's expense. He weighs around 183 pounds and is in the proverbial pink. To him Washington and Everett are merely another stop, another victim on the barnstorming tour which, he hopes, will lead back to a return bout with Louis.

Everett's Record Spotty.

The picture of Everett's career is decidedly dismal by comparison, for he is nearing the end of the trail with little to show for his efforts but a few scars and a few unimportant victories. He is in much the same position as Braddock when he met Baer for the title, although the reward will not be nearly as great in the event that he should win.

Everett pumped new life into his waning career two weeks ago by knocking out Murray Kanner with a bristling right-hand punch. That one shot earned a crack at Pastor for him, and Everett foresees a few more lucrative bouts if he happens to upset the highly touted New Yorker.

One thing in Buck's favor is the weight, for he will almost match Pastor in poundage. Usually, the drawling North Carolinian has to give away from 10 to 20 pounds and consequently has been at a huge disadvantage. Fighting somebody his approximate size will be new to him and possibly helpful.

Good Fight Likely.

From a spectator's viewpoint it should be a pleasing fight, for both boys like to come in punching. Pastor's efforts against Louis to the contrary notwithstanding. Everett may be belted out, as the wise boys are wagering, but he's going to bother Pastor considerably before they turn out the lights. And it is not too far fetched to believe that he can whip his opponent, for Everett needs to win badly, and a desperate fighter is the toughest kind of opponent.

Steve Mamakos faces Joey Spangler, of Richmond, in a six-round semifinal. Two other sixes involve Lou Jallos and Buster Carroll; Tommy Tucker and Johnny Windsor. The latter, a Pittsburgh coal miner by profession, is fighting out of Tampa. Tucker, a likely looking lad, is Pastor's stablemate. Billy Smith and Doug Swetnam open the program with a four-round fight.

Miller-Salamone Bout Here Friday Stirring Interest

The impending meeting of Buster Miller, local Golden Gloves champion, with Georgie Salamone, New England titleholder, is stirring up no little interest in the gigantic boxing carnival which will be held at C. U. on Friday night.

The bouts, bringing together Washington's best amateur scrappers and leading fighters from New England, were arranged as part of the campaign to raise money for the drive against infantile paralysis. In all, 12 matches are scheduled, with four local bouts supplementing eight intersectional affairs.

The meeting of Miller and Salamone will not be strange for the pair had it out in the finals of the All-America tournament held in Boston in December. Salamone was awarded a disputed decision after a battle which critics said was the most sensational fight of the tournament.

P.M.C. Enters Horse Show

Five Students to Aid in Fort Myer Events.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chester, Pa., Jan. 30.—A team of five cadets will represent Pennsylvania Military College in the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer, Va., February 1 and 2.

Cadet Edward Hogan, of Boston, who captains the P. M. C. team, is the stand-out performer, because of his skill in the jumps. He won the 5-foot jump class competition at the Boston Horse Show last summer. Hogan has four horses of his own, will ride his favorite, Air Flight, at Fort Myer.

Hogan, Wieland, Smith and Derr will compose the quartet entered in the jump class for colleges, in which the score of the best three performers out of four counts for the trophy.

P. M. C. also will be represented in the Fort Myer show of February 22.

Patty Berg, Partner Win Scotch Match

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Patty Berg and Gus Novotny won a mixed Scotch foursome match played as a prelude today to the Miami Biltmore Women's Amature tournament.

Sixteen teams took part. Miss Berg, of Minneapolis, and Novotny, of La Grange, Ill., tied for first place with Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., and Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J. Each team shot 39-38 for 77's, but the winners took the event with a birdie 4 on the first extra hole of the playoff.

Marlboro Loses In Deciding Game For Half Honors

Heurich soccer team won the second-half title of the Recreation League yesterday by trouncing the Marlboro booters, 3 to 1, in the deciding encounter on the East Potomac Polo field.

It was the second triumph of the season for the Heurich eleven over Marlboro, against one tie. The teams were deadlocked for the top post at the end of the second half of league play.

A strong westerly wind aided the Heurich team in the first half, giving them the advantage on the offense and presenting a wall-like defense. Sienuta, R. McBain and Gunn scored for a 3-0 lead at half time.

The Marlboro team played with the wind in the second period but M. Buck was the only lineman able to score.

Heurich is slated to play the Sun Radio team, first-half winners, next Sunday. The playoff series will be either one or three games.

Takoma Pros Win by 51-17

Armstrong Linoleum Co. Is 4th Victim in Row.

Takoma Fire Department professionals extended their winning streak to four games in a row last night when Armstrong Linoleum Co., of Lancaster, Pa., was defeated decisively in the firehouse gymnasium, 51 to 17.

Takoma Fire Lassies walked away from Veterans' Administration, 59 to 9, and Times Herald tossers rallied late to win over Takoma Homegrown Firemen, 30 to 26.

Buscher brothers, Adams and Reed shared in the scoring barrage and Freilicher contributed both opportune scoring and floor work to the Takoma professional cause. The invading Pennsylvanians were routed after a promising start, the Takomans popping in baskets from all angles after getting the scoring range.

After trailing much of the way Times Herald rallied in the closing moments when Hall made good several sensational tosses to defeat Takoma Firemen in the best game of the night.

May Match Farr, Baer.

New York, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Promoter Mike Jacobs said tonight he would attempt to match Tommy Farr, British heavyweight champion, against Maxie Baer on March 11 as a result of Jim Braddock's withdrawal from boxing.

Lefty Grove Signs.

Boston, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Robert M. (Lefty) Grove has signed a 1938 contract with the Boston Red Sox, according to word received here tonight from General Manager Eddie Collins, attending a baseball writers' dinner at New York.

Murphy Signs For Mat Bout

Will Meet Mike Kilonis in Semifinal Match.

True to his promise that he would have an unusually strong supporting card for the feature wrestling match between Danno O'Mahoney and Hans Steinke, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday booked Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy for a semi-windup against Mike Kilonis Thursday night at Turner's Arena.

Murphy is the young Boston physician, a graduate of the Middlesex School of Surgery and Medicine, who took the local wrestling public by storm, so to speak, in his two matches at the Arena.

Kilonis last Thursday went to a 30-minute draw with Kiman Kudo.

Elwood Cooke Wins Florida Net Title

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Elwood Cooke of Portland, Oreg., won the Florida State tennis championship singles title here today, defeating Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., in the finals, 8—6, 6—4, 6—0.

Marta Bennett of Miami, took the women's singles crown from Mrs. Lila G. Porter of Mobile, Ala., 6—0, 6—4, 6—4.

Cooke and Vernon Marcum of Lakeland, downed Wilmer Hines of Hollywood, Calif., and Kovacs to win the men's doubles championship, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Gold Lace Captures $800 Nestor Handicap

Fight On, favorite in the betting, was second and Justwar, third. A crowd of 8,000 attended. Gold Lace paid $20, $7.80 and $3.60. Fight On paid 4.80 and $3.20 and Justwar, $3.40.

Norton Fails To Overtake Point Leader

Illness and the defensive play of three Southern College basketball teams collaborated in a successful week-end coup to check the rise of Charlie Norton, broad-shouldered Maryland University center, who saw a chance to gain the District scoring lead wasted.

After scoring 14 points in last Thursday night's Maryland-Virginia game to narrow the gap between him and the leader, Wayne Ambrose, Catholic University forward, to 26 points, he was stricken by a high fever and generally run-down condition before the Terps were to meet the North Carolina Tarheels Friday at Chapel Hill.

Although he requested Coach Burt Shipley to allow him to play so that he might have a chance to catch Ambrose in the North Carolina game and the Duke game Saturday, he was unable to hit his stride as a high temperature proved too great an obstacle.

He did manage, however, to register seven points in the Tarheel battle and eight the next night, but still trails Ambrose by 11 points with his 123.

The Cardinal senior, who held the lead he took at the offset of the season, added five points to his total when he scored that many points while the Brookland team was defeating Western Maryland. He has averaged 13.4 points per game for ten games.

The only changes in the first five positions involved George Knepley, another Maryland forward, and Irish Carroll, Catholic University forward. Knepley scored 13 points on the Terp road trip to regain third place after having relinquished it to the Card shooter last week.

Knepley trailed Norton, his teammate, by 50 points, having a total of 73. Carroll managed to score but two field goals against the Green Terrors and now is one point short of a third-place tie, with 72 points.

Bernard Campanalle Smashes Cycle Mark

Daytona Beach, Fla., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Bernard Campanalle of Providence, R. I., piloted his speeding motorcycle to a new world's record today to win the annual 200-mile championship race of the American Motorcycle Association.

Campanalle's official time was 2:42.10. He averaged 74.90 miles an hour for the race, run over a 3.2-mile course that included stretches on both Daytona's famous beach and a parallel hard-surfaced road.

Terp Quintet In Important Tilt Tonight

Maryland Must Beat V. P. I. to Retain Chance in S. Conference.

Faced with virtual elimination from the Southern Conference Tournament should it lose, Maryland's ill-fated basketball team tonight is prepared to end a three-game losing streak by trimming the invading Virginia Poly quint, at College Park. Game time is 8 p. m.

The Terps, defeated three times in succession on a recent Southern foray, will be handicapped by the doubtful condition of two of its most dependable players, Charley Norton and Waverly Wheeler. They became ill on the trip and it is not known whether they will be able to start. Norton's trouble is an unusually high fever and general rundown condition while Wheeler is suffering from a fever alone.

Maryland, having won only two games in conference competition, now has only a slight chance to qualify for the conference tournament, which is limited to eight teams, and a defeat tonight would all but erase any hopes of a loop title.

V. P. I., 29-23 loser to American University in their game Saturday night, probably will be installed a slight favorite over the Terps. On the basis of the efforts of each against Richmond, a common foe, the Virginians appear the stronger of the two. They defeated Richmond by a sizable margin after Richmond had downed Maryland in a close fray earlier this season.

Katy Rawls Sets Free-Style Record

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Kathryn Rawls, of Fort Lauderdale, splashed over a 25-yard course to best the 200-yard national free-style mark today.

Her time was 2 minutes 19.7 seconds. Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., held the record of 2 minutes 20.5 seconds which she set in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1933.

Miss Rawls has bettered three records on three successive Sundays, all in the free-style class.

Eagles Beat Indians.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—The New Haven Eagles, paced by George Allen, who scored twice, defeated the Springfield Indians, 2-1, in an International American Hockey League game tonight.

Matt Twomey Thinks Gevinson Is Getting the Old Run-Around

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mr. Mathew Twomey, who handles Lou Gevinson's financial affairs, stormed through the sports department portals the other evening, waved a menacing left at the sports editor, threw down (carefully) his camel's hair topcoat, and in no uncertain terms announced as how his boy is getting a run-around from the other boys his weight.

"We were promised a shot at the winner of the Reid-Dupre fight," said Mr. Twomey, who speaks out fearlessly in the first person plural, "and what happens. Why isn't Ahearn putting the match in? Reid beat Dupre, and Dupre holds a win over us, don't that make him better than us? What's he giving us the dodge for? He oughtta jump at the chance to meet a fighter (you means a couple of fighters, don't you Mr. Twomey) Dupre beat, shouldn't he?"

Twomey was indeed indignant. We (he's got us in the habit) could almost see him putting on the mittens and going after Reid personally.

"We'll take him," he continued, "we'll take anybody in the world for that matter, so why don't they make the match? Reid's a roommate of Armanda Sicilia's, a man we take with no trouble a couple of weeks ago." (Twomey gave Sicilia a terrific verbal blasting from seat No. 2, row 4, in this one.) "Maybe Sicilia's put a bug in his ear. It looked to me like Sicilia was trying to go distance after we hurt him in the fifth, and maybe he tells this Reid we punch too hard for him. But whatever it is, we want to fight, and we'll take anybody—even Armstrong."

Perhaps, we suggested, Gevinson should take on Dupre again.

"No," Twomey says, "No, not after he loses. He's a dead duck around here, and there's no profit in fighting him again. Why, he only drew 900 potatoes against Reid, and not much more than that the first time he showed here. We'd jump at a chance to fight him for a straight guarantee, or any kind of a right proposition, but not on a percentage when he has no drawing power."

"Al don't like dem soutpaws," Goldie confided, "and Lou punches too terrific for him. He don't like it."

But Ahearn is hopeful of booking Gevinson with Leo Rodek, fourth ranking featherweight of the world, at the Arena February 21. If he makes this match, and it looks as if he will, it should be one of the season's better exhibitions. Rodek is one of the stiffest punchers for his size in the ring, and is a clever ring general along with it.

The Chicagoan is under the wing of Nate Lewis, who also handles Harry Thomas' business, and who has booked the latter in Madison Square Garden the middle of February. Lewis, incidentally, has taken over all of Harold Steinman's stable, while that worthy devotes his entire efforts to Kingfish Levinski's wrestling career.

Another match on the fire involves George Abrams and Ivan Nedomatsky, which may not materialize because Abram's manager, Sid Fishel, isn't too keen about it. "Who is Nedomatsky," he asks? "A good, strong boy, but he seems headed nowhere in particular, and what does it mean to us to beat him? We'd have everything to lose and nothing to gain."

"Marty won't train," moans Jim, who also is handling Nate Brown. "And he can't win if he's not in condition. Brown's still cleaning up, but Marty looks like he's at the end of his rope in the fight game."

Perce Wolfe Nears World Pin Record

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Perce Wolfe, Occidental's duck-pin ace, came within seven pins of breaking the world's record for five games last night at Lucky Strike in the second block of the Howard Campbell sweepstakes, counting 761. The Hyattsville roller missed a two-pin spare in the final box that would have given him another chance to break the mark.

But despite Wolfe's great scoring, the Nation's No. 1 bowler, Astor Clarke, paced the field at the end of the second block with 1,360 for the ten games, 19 pins ahead of Wolfe. Clarke, who rolled 178 Saturday night at Georgetown, came through with another great single game performance last night with 174 in the second game.

Wolfe never dropped below 145 in the five games. He started with a 158 game, his highest of the night, and followed with 157. His three-game total was 470, as he smashed the pins for a 155 count in the third game.

Fans Jam Alleys.

The fans, who packed the Lucky Strike plant in a fashion that would put sardines to shame, were standing on radiators and each other's toes as all crowded around to see Wolfe continue his spurt. He dropped to 145 in the fourth game, missing a single pin spare, his second of the night.

Four marks in the first five boxes of the final game started the husky bowler toward the world's mark, but he suffered two bad breaks in the seventh and eighth boxes. He spared in the ninth frame but still needed another spare and seven count in the final for the record.

This first effort in the final frame counted eight pins, leaving two standing in the corner, but his second ball caught only the inside pin as the crowd "oohed" and "ahed."

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.
Copyright, 1938, by the United Press

New York, Jan. 30.—He might muddle the middleweight situation worse than it is now:

I'm talking about Glen Lee, the Nebraska Wildcat—by way of Los Angeles. And I'll admit that the first time I ever saw his name I thought he was Chinese. But he isn't Chinese. He's a Scotch-Irish terrier who tangles with Fred Apostoli at Madison Square Garden in a 12-rounder next Friday night.

Punch promenade is still marveiling over the first four rounds of the grand brawl between Apostoli, the Frisco bellhop, and Freddie Steele, world middleweight champion, at the Garden January 7. After that Steele faded and was knocked out technically in the ninth round. Every boxing expert who witnessed that browl said Apostoli beat Steele because he crowded the champion in that over-the-weight match.

* * * *

That's why Friday night's bout should be so good. Mr. Glen Lee loves to have people crowd him. Because he's at his best when throwing those short hooks to the body and head as an opponent is marching in.

* * * *

Apostoli is favored at 5-2 to beat Lee. But odds mean nothing in the fight game where the underdog seems to be winning most of the recent bouts. If I know Lee, he relishes being an underdog against Apostoli, whom Lee figures will actually fight him. That's all Lee asks. "Give me somebody who will fight."

* * * *

Lee is only 23 years old. He's still just a kid. And when you see him come out in the gymnasium or in the ring with that peculiar little kimono, he looks somewhat girlish. But you soon lose that impression when you see him in action. He storms about the ring, seeking an opening where he can land a knock-out punch. And he'll argue with the referee and threaten to bust that official in the beezer if said official interferes with his campaign of punches. He wants to fight—without interference.

* * * *

Freddie Steele is recognized generally as world middleweight champion, despite his technical knock-out defeat to Apostoli. If Lee beats Apostoli, he will look for a title fight with Steele—an outdoor title fight in New York or in Los Angeles, where the bout would draw at least $100,000.

* * * *

Lee is certain to beat Apostoli, according to Lee's manager, Joey Greenberg, who already has bet $1,000 on Lee's chances. Greenberg says, "Lee can't miss. He's young, strong, rough, rugged, and a good puncher who will wear any middleweight down."

* * * *

Lee in his two Eastern appearances beat Walter (Popeye) Woods and knocked out Harry Balsamo. They were New York's best middleweights. Before that he was recognized by the National Boxing Association as the No. 1 contender for the welterweight championship—after defeating Ceferino Garcia and Izzy Janazzo. Only his inability to continue making the welterweight limit deprived him of a chance at the welter crown, now worn by Barney Ross.

* * * *

Lee goes to bed early every night—has no bad habits—likes to read more than Gene Tunney—has no girl friends—and doesn't smoke or drink. He will weigh about 154 pounds, against a maximum of 161 for Apostoli. Lee says, "Thats a lot of weight to overcome. But I'll whittle him down to my size—if he'll fight. That's all I ask—let Apostoli get out there and first, and I'll lick him—and I'm not steering you wrong."

Local Pro Five Loses To Newark

By Jack Munhall.

Heurich's basketball bubble, stretched to misshapen proportions by five successive victories, popped like a beer cap yesterday as the Newark Club grabbed a 36-34 overtime decision in the most exciting professional fuss ever seen in the Heurich gym.

Less than 600 spectators, one of the thinnest audiences of the season, were the privileged witnesses to a battle that presented most of the prize elements of basketball and football in a fictional manner. The crazy-quilt battle abruptly ended after 2 minutes and 23 seconds of the second extra period when Venty Leib, former New York University captain, rammed in a field goal from beyond midcourt.

But even then many in the crowd were not satisfied that the game was over and perhaps the complaint was justified for it was not completed. The evenly matched teams were deadlocked at 32-32 at the end of regulation time, 34-34 at the finish of the first added session and then entered into a first-team-that-scores-wins period. When that failed to bring a score, it was announced that the game would continue for only one more minute, if no basket were made, because both teams had to make a train.

Lieb Wins Game.

Twenty-three breathless seconds flitted by as the ball changed hands oftener than a Canadian dime until Lieb flung his fatal flip which bounded back and forth in the hoop, fell out and then back in to provide the final thrill. As soon as the ball had decided its proper resting place, both fives rushed from the floor and into the dressing room before anybody could restrain them and did not return to play the last 37 seconds.

In the first extra stanza Milt Schonfeld, little Heurich guard who was ill but played anyhow, was knocked unconscious during one of the scrimmages that resembled football center rushes. Schonfeld, momentarily free for a "set" shot, was suddenly smashed to the floor and up against a brick wall as Bernie Schiffer, Newark forward, threw Heurich's Whitey Wilson against Schonfeld to check the shot. After a brief delay, Militant Milt was revived and play resumed.

It was an uphill fight that Heurich waged to deadlock the game in the last of the regular three 15-minute periods. After hopping to a 6-0 lead on three rapid pot shots by Ralph Bennie, the Brewers yielded to the superb passing and shooting of Herb Cohen and Milt Turpin and were behind, 13-11 at the end of the opening period. After that until the third period it seemed that Heurich simply couldn't tie the count although it remained two points behind. Every time Newark scored, Heurich would score, but not before.

Zahn Ties Score.

With the crowd on its feet begging for a basket, Otts Zahn finally stymied the count at 32-32 three seconds before the final gun with a charity throw after having failed in a similar attempt a few seconds before. In the extra period, Ben Goldfaden apparently clinched the game for Heurich before drifting through for a snowbird but the same Leib, who ultimately won the game, slammed in a midcourt shot to tie the score again at 34-34. And there it remained until Mr. Leib wound up and let fly some five minutes later.

Despite playing their hardest game of the campaign (according to the boys) both teams immediately left to catch a Newark-bound train to fulfill a date in the New Jersey city at about 10 o'clock last night. Thus the players got no rest, jumping right off the choo-choo into another battle. It's nice work, if you can stand it!

Riggs Tops Grant To Square Series

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, second ranking player of the United States, evened the score today with Bryan M. Grant, Davis-Cupper and fourth player nationally, defeating the tiny Atlanta netter in an exhibition match which went only four sets.

Riggs won, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4, 6—1.

Grant had outbattled Riggs in a grueling five-set match to win the Miami Biltmore Tournament several weeks ago, but today it was a different story.

Thompson Better.

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 30 (AP).—Mayor M. J. (Mike) Thompson, veteran football official, is expected to return to his home here early in February. He suffered a heart attack in Waterbury, Conn., during the holidays and has been under treatment there.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

The entry of the horse, Peedeeque, has been ordered refused by the stewards until such time as accompanied by a veterinarian's certificate of soundness. Upon examination by the track veterinarian following the running of the seventh race Wednesday, the 7-year-old gelding was found to have bled and also showed a soreness in the right knee. Racing Secretary Charlie McLennan is not taking any chances with the ability of the South American importations. He piled 124 pounds on Vitelio for the Miami Beach Handicap despite the fact that the invader showed nothing in his first start at this track. Vitelio is a 7-year-old bay horse by Henry Lee and bred in Chile. Henry Lee is the leading South American sire. My West Coast correspondent tells me that Santa Anita has gone record crazy again and that the track is being scraped regularly. That new three-eighth mark last week is just a sample. However, the hard surface is playing havoc with the feet of horses and may have its effect on some of the entries for the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap. As most outstanding older stake horses have some sort of leg trouble, some may be knocked out of training before the big race. It is possible that the track is being readied for Seabiscuit. The harder and faster, the better he likes an oval. But, as I have written before, I have a report that Seabiscuit is a doubtful starter in the $100,000 race. I haven't seen a workout on him in weeks.

BILL.

First race—Hello Stranger appears nicely placed in the day's opener and any price will be a good one. Spanish Mammon has worked well and is dangerous. Jubilee to take care of the others.

Second race—Spanish Maid may be the right one in this field. She has plenty of speed and young Ward is a fair rider. Evening Time is better than generally rated and is due to be a threat. Count Valiant for the show award.

Third race—Sang Froid, a veteran with a stretch punch, deserves the call in this sprint. Gets in with steadying weight and I'm going to string along. Toni and Many Moons for the place and show money.

Fourth race—Sure Cloud may take the measure of the talent assembled for this dash. Both works and races favor this one. Tilaana and Memoirs will be ready to battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Fifth race—Polyata gets 10 pounds from Co-Sport for this event and the seven furlongs appears to be the right route. I'm going to take them in that order. Sketchbook won his last and should make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Finance definitely needed that last as a tightener. May take down the chief money here despite the top weight assignment of 120 pounds. Maecloud and Bulwark to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Red Rogue ran a bang-up second last out and met with some interference. With clear sailing this one may be the right one. Easiest Way and Far Cry should be keen stretch factors.

Eighth race—Evergold gets my call in the day's finale. The veteran likes the route and gets in with only 113 pounds. Boston Pal and Perlette for the other cash positions.

Best bet—Polyata.

Navy Teams Face Heavy Week's Slate

Cagers Open With Old Liners Wednesday at Annapolis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Jan. 30.—This will be a big week locally in basketball, the Navy playing Maryland here on Wednesday and Columbia on Saturday. St. John's resumes its league games against Loyola in Baltimore on Wednesday and will be opposed by the fast Gettysburg team next Saturday evening.

In addition to the basketball with Columbia, the Navy wrestlers meet Lehigh, one of the top-notchers in the sport and cross swords with the fencers of Hamilton College.

On the same day the Navy Plebes play basketball with Tome School and box the freshmen of Virginia Poly.

After losing to Virginia Military, the Navy wrestlers made a fine comeback to win from North Carolina last Saturday. Lehigh is probably stronger than either of the Middies' previous opponents.

Navy boxers have a rest this week but are looking forward with keen interest to the match with Virginia a week later, which will close the home season, Syracuse being met at Syracuse on February 19. Virginia is the only team which holds the edge in its series with Navy.

Winning five varsity matches and two for Plebes Saturday, Navy had one of the best days in its athletic history when it cleaned up a big card of contests.

It also ended a most encouraging month, during which its varsity teams won 12 matches and lost only two and its plebe teams won three times and lost one.

Printers Set Tourney.

Bears Defeat Dixie Eleven

Score 41-to-20 Victory at New Orleans.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Jan. 30.—The Chicago Bears, champions of the Western section of the National Professional Football League, trounced a team designated as the Southern All-Stars, 41 to 20, in a charity game today.

About 7,000 fans saw the Bears outpass and outrun the Southern college players in an exhibition of wide-open football. The All-Stars relied almost entirely on passes and laterals to score, with Gaynell Tinsley, Don Hutson, Pat Coffee, Rock Reed, Slick Horton and Ad Lind in the starring roles.

John Doehring, sensational southpaw passer for the Bears, flipped one behind his back to Lester McDonald for 25 yards and the pro team's final touchdown as the Bears made a show of the game.

Sam Francis scored twice for the Bears, with other touchdowns made by Biuvuid, McDonald and Nolting. Tinsley, Lind and Hutson scored for the All-Stars.

Refined Sugar Exports 13.4% Higher LastYear

New York, Jan. 30.—Refined sugar exports by the United States during 1937 totaled 63,153 long tons, as compared with 55,713 tons during 1936, an increase of 7,440 tons, or approximately 13.4 per cent, according to Lamborn & Co.

The refined sugar exports during 1937 went to over 50 different countries, while in the previous year over 60 countries were included in the list. The United Kingdom topped the list in 1937 with 33,329 tons, being followed by Colombia and Holland with 9,477 tons and 3,663 tons, respectively.

Copper Exports.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Exports of copper from the United States in December amounted to 26,276 standard tons, compared with 25,364 in November, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today.

President's Idea of Lower Prices Without Affecting Wages Puzzles Business.

New York, Jan. 30.—Last week in finance was marked by a retreat from the advanced lines of optimism held around the beginning of the year, supported by the hope of an early recovery in business activity and by action at Washington designed to aid in that recovery. In his further pronouncement to the effect that business men must reduce their selling prices at the same time leaving inviolate wages, a large element of cost, and in his warning that, if business does not improve substantially and right away the Government will step in with a revival of its high-spending methods—pump priming and relief—the President has shown that he is still living in the outskirts of economic realities.

His policy as most recently expressed, even discounting

Alexander Saxe Dies; Assistant To Loan Board

Alexander Saxe, 39, technical assistant to the Home Loan Bank Board, died yesterday at his home, 1630 Harvard street northwest.

Widely known for his research into low-cost housing, Mr. Saxe came to Washington in 1933 as chief of technical research in the housing division of the PWA. He had earlier been active in construction work in New York City.

He supervised construction of several large buildings in New York City, including Essex House. During the seven years before he came to Washington, he was an instructor in the college of architecture at Columbia University. At one time he operated the Small House Advisory Service of New England.

Born in New York City, he attended Columbia University. He pitched for the varsity baseball team there, playing with Lou Gehrig, major league star. During his preparatory school days he was a teammate of Frankie Frisch, another professional star.

He was a member of the American Arbitration Society. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Jane Saxe, of Washington; his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Saxe, and an uncle, Albert Saxe, both of New York City. Private funeral service will be held at his home, followed by burial Tuesday in New York.

Mrs. Mary Iden's Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary V. Iden, 89, oldest resident of Fairfax County, Va., who died Saturday, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Old Bethel Church. Burial will be in the family burying ground at Kenmore.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kemple Smith, old Virginia residents, Mrs. Iden was the widow of John M. Iden, Civil War veteran.

She is survived by four children, Mrs. Minnie Etchins and B. E. Iden, of Fairfax, and Manley and James Iden, of Washington.

Southern Experts On Farming Meet

Atlanta, Jan. 30 (AP).—The thirty-ninth annual convention of the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers opens here Wednesday.

David D. Long, of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer of the association, estimated more than 1,500 agricultural scientists from the South and Washington and others would attend.

Dr. Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, heads the list of speakers.

LUIS QUINTANILLA.

At the age of 43 he has won a reputation as one of Spain's greatest painters. But thanks to the marksmanship of Spanish Rebels, the pictures on which his reputation largely rests have been destroyed.

Quintanilla can smile about it, however, as he proved yesterday during an interview at the Mayflower Hotel. He arrived in this country a week ago to arrange an exhibition of new paintings in New York, and took time off for a fleeting visit to Washington.

His greatest accomplishment, he believes, was a monumental fresco decorating a memorial portico which the City of Madrid dedicated to Pablo Iglesias, founder of the Socialist Party. It took him months to complete the 200 life-sized figures of the fresco's 11 panels. The date he completed it—July 17, 1936—was the date the revolution broke out in Morocco.

The portico fared no better than the rest of the city during the invasion of Madrid. The paintings were shot to bits by Rebel artillery and the sculptor who had been working with Quintanilla on the memorial was killed defending the city.

Two large panels in the School of Medicine at University City also were destroyed by the only grenade which entered the building. Soon afterward, while he was in France, a Rebel bomber blew up his Madrid home and studio, ruining his library, and paintings representing five years' work.

Quintanilla is no escapist. Last June he turned his back on the wreckage of his career as a muralist and went to the front. Traveling 10,000 kilometers in three months, he made rapid sketches of war scenes, then retired to Barcelona and turned them into pen-and-ink drawings.

"Battle scenes? No!" he declared emphatically.

In a rapid stream of French, accompanied by pantomime, he pointed out that in actual battle he was too busy watching for the next bomb. The sketches are of trenches, little Andalusian villages as they look after a battle, the life of the soldiers and prisoners—the behind-the-scenes phase of war.

Quintanilla saw as much of the Teruel campaign as the soldiers did. "It was devilishly cold," he said. "Drawing was hard because I could use only one hand; the other I kept gloved for fear it might freeze. With planes above me and artillery around me, my ears did most of the work."

He is proud of the fact that Spanish critics call his work propaganda for peace. "Mussolini forbids pacifist propaganda even when his country is not at war," he explained.

Although we are fighting and will not stop until we have conquered, we love peace and dare to say so."

New Organ Dedicated At St. Paul's Services

In the first of a series of services commemorating the ninety-fifth anniversary of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett street northwest, the church's new Hammond organ was dedicated yesterday. The organ was the gift of Miss Louie Dale Leeds in memory of her father, mother, brother and sister.

The Rev. Henry W. Snyer, D. D., pastor, was assisted in the dedication services by the Rev. U. S. G. Rupp, D. D., of Baltimore; and the Rev. B. F. Bieber, D. D., and the Rev. Harry P. Dunlap, both of Washington. The theme of the sermon was "My Praise to God." Special music was offered by the choir under direction of Lynn L. Gillchrist, with Donald T. Heffley at the organ.

Was Former Assistant Solicitor General; Rites Tomorrow.

William J. Hughes, sr., 74, former assistant United States Solicitor General and authority on Federal legal procedure, died Saturday night at his home, 2256 Cathedral avenue northwest.

Mr. Hughes had served as attorney in the Department of Justice for 34 years at his retirement in 1933. Over much of his career in the department, he was in charge of questions of jurisdiction and procedure in the Federal courts, particularly the Supreme Court.

In 1912, he served as secretary to a committee of Supreme Court Justices set up to revise the rules of practice in courts of equity in the United States. Since 1914, he had been a lecturer on Federal procedure at the school of law of Georgetown University.

He is the author of a 16-volume standard reference work on Federal practice and procedure. He was a member of the American Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association, the American Law Institute, the American Judicature Society, District Bar Association, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the American Association of Legal Authors, the Catholic Historical Society and the Columbia Historical Society.

Mr. Hughes also was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants in the District, the District Society of Pennsylvania, Cosoms Club, National Press Club, Lawyers' Club and the Columbia Country Club, and Phi Alpha Delta fraternity. He also belonged to the Society of American Magicians, and the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

Born in Upland County, Pa., he came to Washington in 1885, and took his law degree at Georgetown University. He was awarded the degree of doctor of laws at the Philadelphia College of Law in 1931.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Josephine E. Hughes, a son, William J. Hughes, jr., Washington attorney, and a daughter, Mrs. William J. Burlee, of Richmond, Va.

Requiem mass will be at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Catholic Church of St. Thomas, the Apostle, following brief services at 8:30 a. m. at the home. Burial will be in Mount Olviet Cemetery.

Woman in Berlin, Md., Has 128 Descendants

Berlin, Md., Jan. 30 (AP).—If Mrs. Ellen Cooper Littleton, 90, should decide to call her family together, she probably would have to hire a hall.

Mrs. Littleton, a widow, has 128 living descendants. They are: Eight children, 60 grandchildren, 49 great-grandchildren, 10 great-great-grandchildren and 1 great-great-great-grandchild.

Pastor Commends Stand of Church in Fight on Syphilis

With the assertion that he was "glad to see the church sharing leadership in bringing the problem of syphilis to the attention of the youth of the country," Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, last night opened a young people's meeting, at which Roy Everett, of the District Social Hygiene Society, gave an illustrated talk on the disease.

The audience was composed largely of boys and girls of high school age from Mount Pleasant and Cleveland Park Congregational Churches.

Everett said that physical education courses ought to deal with venereal diseases, which "do their deadliest work on youth."

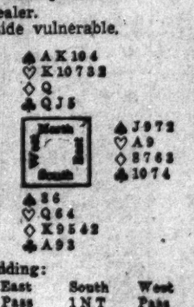
Entry Management.

Entry management is perhaps the most difficult problem with which a declarer can be confronted. The mark of an expert is the manner in which he creates or conserves, as the case may be, entries in both his own hand and dummy. The hand shown below, taken from a recent duplicate at Crockford's Club, New York, proved a Waterloo to six of the eight declarers.

Match point duplicate.
North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 N T	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's bidding was bad. He should have started with one spade in order to avoid the necessity for "reversing." The manner in which he actually bid advertised a hand much stronger than he held. The logical method was to start with one spade so that the heart suit could be comfortably shown later.

West opened his fourth best club, dummy's Jack was played and it held. A low heart was then led and the fall of East's nine under declarer's Queen was carefully noted at two tables, but probably disregarded at the others, because the respective plays of the successful and the unsuccessful declarers split sharply at this point. With the single purpose of establishing the heart suit quickly and without undue loss, six declarers, having won with the heart Queen, led a low heart toward dummy and finessed the ten spot. They were successful in driving out the Ace but notably unsuccessful in fulfilling their contract. East returned a club and after that it was a simple matter for the defenders to lock the play in the dummy—declarer could not win a single diamond trick.

The two successful declarers kept an eye on their entries. Having won with the heart Queen, they counted that even if the heart suit could be brought home with only one loser they would still need a diamond for the ninth. The heart nine having dropped from East, they saw that there would be no advantage in leading a heart toward dummy—that if East had had the Ace-nine blank it would be just as easy to lead a low heart from dummy, whereas if he had had the Ace-Jack-nine, either play would be equally disadvantageous. Therefore, they conserved the entry they had gained in the heart Queen and led a diamond toward the blank Queen. After that there was no stopping them whether West hopped up or not, since the favorable position of the Ace-nine of hearts in East's hand actually existed, and since the club Ace was retained in the South hand for entry.

Requiem mass will be celebrated at 9 a. m. tomorrow at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Credit Liberalization For Small Firms Urged

A letter urging liberalization of credit for small business and industry was sent yesterday to President Roosevelt by Representative Herman P. Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut, who two years ago introduced a bill to establish an intermediate credit corporation to aid in financing small commercial and industrial firms.

Kopplemann suggested that the President discuss such financing this week with small businessmen.

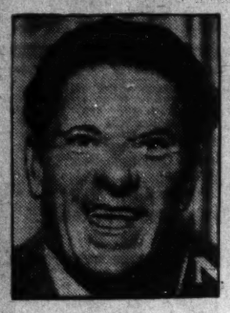
Bob Burns Says—



Half of these stories about picture actors out here in Hollywood bein' at "outs" with each other are about as well founded as the story that got out about two of my uncles down home. They were both pretty old and lived on the same road but they never visited each other.

Finally the people in town got to thinkin' they were bitter enemies and were jest waitin' for the feud to start. As years went by and nothin' happened, some of the inquisitive citizens went out and asked one of my uncles why he never called on his brother.

My uncle says, "Well, we're both pretty old and we're both very deaf and even if he heard me knock, I wouldn't be able to hear him say 'Come in.'"

BENNY If Dreams Came True By J. Carver Pusey

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Approximately 600 of Uncle Sam's nieces and nephews contributed the complaints that form the Ellender resolution alleging "czarism" in the civil service structure. With all the publicity, it would be thought more complaints would have come. Undoubtedly, many others would have confided on the bosom of the Senator, had not they feared their identities might leak out. Actually, 300 questionnaires were returned to the Senator and there were 300 additional letters. Besides this, there was a scattering of visitors to the office but their complaints weren't down in writing . . .

But while on the subject of grievances, it should be recorded that at a recent meeting of U.F.W.A. Local 15 (Veterans Administration), the 200 persons present were invited to bring their complaints to the adjustment committee. Since then, so many have come through that the committee was compelled to increase its number by three in order to handle the rush business. All of which, as the A.F.G.E. would put it, indicates the urgent need of some form of civil service appeals court. But there's no use hoping the Government is going to create any high-paid court which would have such far-reaching fingers as would be able to cope with grievances all the way from the field service in California to the services in Florida and Maine. One of the best friends of the employes has indicated that, flatly. An appeals system couldn't function solely for the employes at the seat of Government here, it would have to be one for the field as well . . .

Recognition comes again to the voice of Arthur Cornwall, "Carolina's Lyric Tenor," who works here for Representative James P. Richards, of South Carolina. Dr. John R. Hart, chaplain, the Washington Memorial Chapel, Valley Forge, Pa., has invited Cornwall to be the soloist at the fifteenth annual celebration of the partiotism of the States at Valley Forge, at 3 p. m. Sunday, February 20. Cornwall is well known as a radio and recording tenor, both in the South and in New York City. His voice was discovered by Mme. Galli-Curci during a visit to Columbia, S. C., where Cornwall was a student at the University . . . Already 960 Federal employes have enrolled in the School of Public Affairs, which affords in-service training for Government workers, at the American University. A wide range of subjects are offered in the winter-spring term, including accounting, administrative and constitutional law, statistics, supervision, labor relations, personnel management, counseling Government employes, public relations, social security administration, sociology, speech, transportation and public utilities, modern languages, office management and filing, etc.

The first performance of the Union Playhouse, sponsored by Local No. 2, N. F. F. E., takes place Thursday, February 17, in the Agriculture auditorium. There will be a program of pictures and three acts of additional entertainment. Admission is free to members and their guests . . . Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, has accepted an honorary vice presidency in the Maryland Voters League of Washington, a nonpartisan organization . . . A new edition of the civil service act and rules has been issued . . . The AAA announces that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporatoin will purchase Florida oranges immediately for relief distribution and to provide assistance to growers in marketing this year's crop . . . And an I. C. C. er comes in to say the Interior Department seems to have all the employe recreational activity cornered —which isn't true at all, he holds. Pointing out that in the commission they have the In-Come-Co Club, with over half the employes of the commission as members; the I. C. C. Chorus, with 200 sponsors; several athletic associations; a monthly magazine for the In-Com-Co Club; a five-point club, a vast relief association, etc. Which is fine; we never said the I. D. R. A. had things sewed up; we simply said once, a long time ago, that the I. D. R. A. has a genius for getting its affairs into the public prints. . . .

A. F. G. E. Bureau of Standards Lodge 5 announces new officers, as follows: W. H. Miltner, president; Miss Rose Grant and Miss Alice Furness, vice presidents, and Mrs. Grace C. Mulligan, secretary-treasurer; delegates to the District department; Dr. M. G. Lloyd, W. H. Miltner, Mrs. Mulligan; alternates: G. L. Jeffrey, O. G. Lange, E. H. Nunnally . . . The I. D. R. A. (again) is planning a heavy program of track events for this spring, and they're fortunate in having Ellis H. Martin, holder of many cups and medals for his track work at Princeton, as the coach . . . The flustered tumult and shouting that recently attended disclosures of the employment policy in Agriculture's legal division died almost as suddenly away. As far as we know, they're still hiring only lawyers who have the diploma of colleges recognized by the Association of American Law Schools and the blessing of the Washington Bar. "A Strange Rule," comments the A. F. G. E.'s Government Standard this week in hauling out the issue again, adding: "Its adoption by Government departments generally would narrow opportunity and discourage the ambition of thousands of Government employes . . . It is reported the protests of certain individual Government workers have moved some Congressmen and Senators to ask Secretary Wallace to rescind the rule."

Meetings announced by the N. F. F. E. for this week are as follows: Tuesday, 8 p. m., War Department Local 261, 710 Fourteenth street; Friday—5 p. m., Executive Council Local 2, and 8 p. m., Colored Employes Local 71, both at 710 Fourteenth street; 8 p. m., special meeting Adjutant General's Office Local 372, All States Hotel. Saturday—2 p. m., Navy Yard Local 607, Arcade Building, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest. . . . An interesting analysis of the office manual and its part in business management was made the other day by John F. Pierce, director, office service department, TVA, before the Office Management Association.

They're talking now in Interior about how beauty and brains are not incompatible, and this in connection with Velma Lee Carter (National Park Service). Miss Carter, you will recall, won third place in the "Miss Interior Beauty Contest" last fall. Now she goes literary on us—is the first to make an entry in the I. D. R. A.

Hoboes' Chaplain, Arriving in D. C., Eyes Senate Seat

"Walking Munn" Wilson, one-time member of the Kentucky Legislature and now chaplain of the Hoboes of America, arrived in Washington Saturday to announce he might enter the fight for the office of United States Senator from Kentucky. He hitched-hiked from Frankfort, Ky.

"Walking Munn," who is 66, slight and heavily bearded, said he would try to persuade the Representatives and Senators from Kentucky to back Barkley against Gov. Chandler. He said he would invite the Kentucky delegation to a "coffee and . . ." breakfast, and there come out in favor of Barkley.

Then, if the Kentucky Representatives failed to use their influence toward keeping Chandler out of the race, "Walking Munn" said he would enter the race himself. The former politician, whose real name is Munnell Wilson, said he would campaign on foot, attacking Chandler for waste in the administration of government funds, and Barkley for failing to investigate Chandler.

British Leader Lauds Roosevelt Navy Plea

Birmingham, England, Jan. 30.—(U.P.)—Alfred Duff Cooper, British secretary of war, welcomed President Roosevelt's request for an additional armament appropriation in a speech tonight at the Jewelers and Silversmiths' banquet here.

"In this country the decision of the great democracy of the United States to increase its Navy is welcomed everywhere," he said. There is no question of rivalry between us and them. The stronger the United States Navy the better it will be for the peace of the world. We feel a stronger bond of union with them than with any other country. Let us hope that by the success of our system of government other nations will come back to the system of liberty."

Michelson Holds Primary Contests Are Healthy Sign

By the Associated Press.

Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, poo-poohed yesterday the idea that primary contests involving the Senate seats of Democratic Leader Barkley and others would damage the Democratic Party.

In his weekly public letter, "Dispelling the Fog," he noted that "the brilliant young Governor of Kentucky (A. B. Chandler) is dallying with the idea of tilting with Senator Alben W. Barkley * * * for the Kentucky senatorship."

Michelson said "the circumstance of clashing ambitions is a symptom of health and not of disintegration in any successful party."

Naval Officers To Tell of Needs

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, invited high Navy officials yesterday to outline their most immediate needs to the House Naval Committee today at the start of hearings on the Administration's $800,000,000 naval expansion bill.

The committee will ask them how they intend to use a $15,000,000 appropriation President Roosevelt has recommended for experimental work. Navy officials said part of the money might be used to develop a "mosquito" fleet of small, fast and highly armed boats carrying small crews.

The legislation Vinson introduced Friday after the President asked congress for a 20 per cent increase in naval forces, would authorize the construction of 47 additional fighting ships, 22 auxiliaries and 1,000 airplanes.

3,000 Dog Warden Who Seized Ohio Town's Pet Canine

St. Clairsville, Ohio, Jan. 30 (AP).—This county seat town of 3,000 persons hasn't been so riled up in years.

County Dog Warden John McGrew seized Teddy, the community's pet dog, Friday and impounded him for lack of a license.

About 700 students held a mass meeting today. Business and professional men rallied to the fore.

"All resources of my office will be used for Teddy's release," said Mayor John H. Anderson.

Teddy came here of his own accord several years ago. No one owns him. Everybody feeds him. He is the people's pet.

"I can't release him until someone offers him a home and keeps him off the street," McGrew said.

Rubber Magnate Dies.

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 30 (AP).—S. S. Miller, board chairman of the Mohawk Rubber Co., died today a week before a celebration which was to have marked his eighty-second birthday and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Mohawk company, which he helped to found.

Industry Strides On!

DON'T you make the mistake of thinking that this "recession" or anything else can stop your country's onward march!

Something deep-rooted and changeless in our national character is competently on guard against that.

We mean the American heritage of enterprise—our bred-in-the-bone belief in more things for more people as the key to plenty—our will and skill to make things cheaper and better.

Applying to engines as small as 22 horsepower the engineering principles developed in the powerful Diesel locomotives that speed the modern high-utility streamline trains, we foresee the opening of vast new fields of usefulness on land, sea and in the air.

The press everywhere hails the significance of thus making limitless economical power available to the economic benefit of the whole people.

Inspiring as these possibilities are, they are most important not in themselves but because they are illustrative of the great principle involved, the principle underlying American achievement.

American industry has been able to produce a standard of living never before attained by any people in history, to keep on raising wages and lowering prices, by promoting and capitalizing technological progress.

By this is meant the application of science to industry's problems—new things to make, better ways of making present things, lowering costs to put more things within reach of more people—thus increasing work and creating additional national wealth. Such is the sound approach to the great national problem of unemployment, and a great opportunity as well. Increased wages, shorter hours, unless offset by increased productivity, is deflationary—it means less for all, especially those who have the least.

This has made possible a continuous advance in real wages, over the years, and at the same time a reduction in real prices, the lower priced car of today being equal in size and horsepower to the higher priced car of ten years ago.

General Motors, for example, invests each year tens of millions of dollars in new methods and new equipment, as the real approach toward constantly better values, better jobs and better living for all.

There may be halts, there may be setbacks, there may be temporary "recessions," but the instinct of American industry is progress.

Today in a thousand research laboratories throughout the land, bubbling in retorts and fermenting in bold American brains, are the secrets and means to meet the needs and capitalize the possibilities of the future.

Here is being evolved the real surety of America's tomorrow, expressed through the fruitful formula of more and better things at lower prices for more people everywhere.

Make no mistake, the way is forward. Industry strides on!

PROGRESS ON THE AMERICAN PLAN
Over the years wages to the automotive worker have gone up and car prices have gone down
From 1925 to 1937 Automotive Hourly Wages Went Up 18%
Automotive Prices Came Down 45%
